ANN CLIFFORD DONALD CLIFFORD

A 9-year-old girl, Ann Clifford, showed she knew what to do in case of fire. It occurred at her home, 105 Union street, Brighton. First she carried her brother Donald, who is just 1 year old, out into the yard, and then hurried back to assist her mother in getting her brother James to safety. You see James all wrapped up in a blanket. He has been a sufferer from whooping cough for days.

ROOSEVELT'S MOTHER BREAKS HIP IN FALL

19 FLEE TO SAFETY IN BRIGHTON FIRE

Three families, including three sick children, were driven to the street by a two-alarm fire in Union street, Brighton, today.

The fire started on the second floor rear porch and spread rapidly to the third floor and roof, aided by a strong wind.

The blaze was discovered by James Clifford, living on the second floor, who rushed his wife and five children out and then sounded the alarm. Three of his children were ill with colds.

HELPS OTHERS OUT

Clifford then ran up to the third floor and assisted Peter Rocco, his wife and three children out of the burning building.

In the first floor lived the family of John Coleman, his wife and five children. They were warned of the fire by Clifford.

The three Clifford children, ill in bed with colds, are John, three; James, Jr., five, and Donald, one and one-half. His other two children are Ann, nine, and Timothy, eight. Children in the Rocco family are Frank, six; Samuel, eight, and an 8-months-old baby.

FIREMEN HURT

Coleman carried his youngest child, Paul, four, out in a blanket. His other children are John Jr., 16; Mary, 14; Rena, 12, and Elsie, eight.

Districts Fire Chief Thomas Audrioli said the probable cause was hot ashes on the second floor piazza, while damage was estimated at $5000. Audrioli received several cuts on his left hand as did John Clayhive of Ladder 11.

Just for Variety It's Frost Tonight!

Just to provide a little variety, the weatherman today promised a light frost for tonight—and this within two days of a 91 degree heat record.

But, reminded the forecaster, it isn't summer yet, even if Bostonians thought it was when they sweltered Monday.

Summer arrives officially at 10:22 a. m. on Sunday, June 21.

Temperatures were in the lower 50s during last night and dropped lower as the day wore on, notwithstanding the sun. Chilly breezes from the northwest accounted for it.

STOCKS UP

New York, May 20 (AP)—Buyers failed to get behind today's stock market with any exceptional support, but selling tended to dry up in some of the rails, utilities, steels and motors.

Quiet dealings were the rule during the forenoon, and fractional changes predominated in most categories.

Boston Man Held As 2 Die in Crash

Wallingford, Conn., May 20 (INS)—Two Meriden men were killed instantly today when their light sedan was demolished in a crash with two trailer-trucks o nthe Wallingford-Meriden highway. The victims were Harold Cassery, 32, and Leonard Newman, 33.

Arnold W. Church of Boston, Mass., and William Chadwick of South Manchester, truck drivers, were arrested and held in bond of $1000 on technical charges.

Spanish Leftists Strike

Lugo, Spain, May 20 (AP)—Leftists, irked because of what they considered judicial leniency toward a score of Fascists, declared a general strike today.

ENGINE MEN VOTE STRIKE ON 3 ROADS

Engineers and firemen on three New England railroads — the New Haven, Boston & Maine and Maine Central—have voted to strike.

This announcement was made today by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Engineemen after a count of ballots polled by 3000 members in Boston, Portland, Providence and New Haven.

At the same time, an adjustment of difficulties without resource to a strike was forecast.

DIESEL DISPUTE

The only issue in dispute is the number of men to be employed in the cabs of the Diesel-motored locomotives.

The Brotherhood demands employment of two men, as a matter of public safety if not as a means of preventing the abolition of jobs. Its demand has been generally met with the exception of the roads involved, it was said.

92 P. C. FOR STRIKE

Ninety-two per cent of the votes cast, counted at the Boston headquarters of the Brotherhood, favored a strike, and the percentage in favor on each road was not below 90.

Before a strike date is set, chairmen of 33 locals will hold group conferences, probably within the next 72 hours. Rail officials were expected to meet with the Brotherhood leaders.

Landon 4-1 Winner in Jersey

Newark, N. J., May 20 (AP)—Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas was assured of at least 26 of New Jersey's 32 votes at the Republican national convention when returns from the state's primary election were three-fifths complete today.

He also continued his sweep of the preferential voting, having a four-to-one advantage over Senator William E. Borah of Idaho.

The preferential vote in 2366 out of 3578 election districts reported was:

Landon, 218,905.
Borah, 56,801.

MAY GET ALL 32

The four delegates-at-large and 22 of 28 district delegates—a total of 26 votes—were pledged to Landon. Republican leaders still hoped to send a solid delegation to the Cleveland convention by winning with the two other delegates pledged to Landon and swinging the four unpledged delegates into line later.

Interest turned anew to the fight of Governor Harold G. Hoffman to retain his position as titular head of the Republican party in the state.

As the totals mounted, Hoffman dropped from first to fourth place in the contest of five candidates for the four delegate-at-large posts.

He was, however, running well ahead of Franklin W. Fort, who split Hoffman's vote with a bitter attack on the Governor's activities

"When Somers whipped out the revolvers, his eyes seemed to be bulging from his head," Harix related.

Holden Tax Thief Gets 4 Years

Worcester, May 20—George H. Newell, Holden tax collector, who stole public funds to bet on horse races, was today sentenced to four to five years in state prison.

To an indictment charging five counts of larceny, total undetermined, he pleaded guilty in superior court.

Judge Thomas J. Hammond was informed the shortage in his accounts aggregated $28,297.

Advocating the abolition of horse and dog racing, beano and other forms of gambling, the prisoner's counsel, William W. Buckley, said that Newell was tempted to steal in an effort to pay debts incurred by playing the horses.

"He went deeper and deeper in the hole," Buckley said.

District Attorney Owen A. Hoban told the court there was no doubt Newell had been drawn into the maelstrom in which many are now involved, but that an example should be made of his weakness.

A number of character witnesses testified, including Charles F. Proctor, Holden town counsel, who originally applied for the warrant.

Newell disappeared during the winter, leaving his wife and two children penniless in a house on which the mortgage had been foreclosed. He was found in Miami, Fla.—playing the races.

MILLION RAISED BY TOWNSEND

Washington, May 20 (AP)—Dr. F. E. Townsend, back on the stand, told the House investigating committee today that "in the neighborhood of a million dollars" has been collected by the Townsend old age pension organization since its inception.

Asked what the contributors received in return, Dr. Townsend said they "got our organization which is exactly what they paid for."

"We have 8000 clubs throughout the country and a live working organization," Townsend said.

Old Age Revolving Pensions, Inc., was incorporated early in 1935.

In contrast to the crow dwhich thronged the hearing room yesterday, there were only about a hundred spectators on hand when the session opened.

Dr. Townsend was dressed in the same light brown suit he wore at the opening session. He arrived shortly before the committee appeared and sat chatting with his counsel as Chairman Bell (D.) Missouri, pounded the openin ggavel.

HURT 5 DAYS AGO ON VISIT TO NEW YORK

Washington, May 20 (AP)—The White House announced today that Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, 82-year-old mother of the President, was confined in her Hyde Park home with an impacted hip and cracked bone caused by a fall.

The President, who accidentally heard of the injury five days after it happened while talking to his mother on the telephone, will leave here Friday night for Hyde Park to spend two or three days with her.

Stephen T. Early, a presidential secretary, said Mrs. Roosevelt tripped over a six-inch step as she entered the home of the President's daughter in New York city [illegible] ago today. She was visiting [illegible] and "Buzzie", children of Mr. [illegible] Boettiger.

Early said Mrs. Roosevelt suffered no ill effects at the time, entered the home on West 53rd street and after spending some time with the children returned to her own home on 65th street.

The following day she went to Hyde Park and went about her household duties.

Monday night the President called her on the telephone and Mrs. Roosevelt said she was slightly handicapped and told of the fall for the first time.

The President advised her to go to bed at once and call a doctor. X-rays showed an impacted hip and a cracked bone. Doctors advised her to remain in bed at least two weeks.

EARLY FRENCH PAYMENT ON U. S. WAR DEBT LOOMS

HERRIOT SEEN AS BLUM'S FOREIGN SECRETARY

Paris, May 20 (US)—Declaring the "way opened" toward settlement of France's defaulted war debt to the United States, Edouard Herriot, France's champion of payment, is apparently being drawn toward acceptance of the foreign portfolio in the Leftist Government scheduled to be formed by Socialist Leon Blum two weeks hence.

Blum, as the prospective new premier, was reported definitely to have offered to Herriot the post of foreign minister and it was stated that Herriot would give serious consideration to the proposal.

It was even authoritatively reported that Herriot's first act as foreign minister would be to make the $74,787,000 payment to the United States that is due from France June 15.

Warmly praising Blum's recent assertion that the war debt "misunderstanding" must be removed, Herriot, who was ousted as premier in December, 1932, when the French Chamber of Deputies voted to default the war debt, also seconded Blum's argument that a settlement with the United States would pave the way toward greater American participation in European affairs.

At a moment when France is seeking all help available against Germany, the argument has an appeal to the French electorate. Writing in L'Information, Herriot stated:

"How stupid we were when we refused (to pay)!"

Of America's 12 war debtors, only little Finland has continued payments. France's defaults now total $250,292,000; Britain's, $582,803,000.

Recent reports that a powerful faction in the Conservative party is advocating reopening of the debt question by Britain were met in London with authoritative statements that no move was contemplated by the British government.

Roosevelt? Just a Guy!

Haverhill, May 20—Rayard Tuckerman, Jr., candidate for the Republican nomination for the Governor's Council, spoke right up in meeting before the Lincoln Republican Club here when he said: "I once was proud to know President Roosevelt and to call him Franklin and was complimented when he called me Bayard, but now I'm ashamed I know the guy."

"No Place Here For Quitters"—Landon

Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas, Republican candidate for the Presidential nomination, is pictured addressing the graduating class of Attica High School, at Attica, Kan. He urged the graduating students to "shun the prophets of despair" and to remold their future to meet the changes in conditions. Landon insisted there is no place in America for quitters.

ITALIAN-AMERICANS PLAN LANDON CLUB CHAIN

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Groundwork will be laid for the formation of extensive Italian-American Landon Clubs throughout the state at a meeting of the Massachusetts Landon for President Club next Friday night in the Parker House.

Several Italian-American leaders, sensing the popularity of Governor Landon among their big block of voters, have told President Edwin F. Parker of the central Landon organization of their desire to work for the nomination and election of the Kansan for President.

Parker welcomed their offer and will sit down with them Friday.

Without abatement, membership cards in the Landon Club are pouring in at the Parker House headquarters, attesting the tremendous and continuing popularity of the Sunflower State governor among Republican and independent voters.

DEMOCRATS IN SWING

There is also unmistakable evidence that many Democrats are set to vote for Governor Landon in the event he is accepted by the politicians at the convention.

With former United States Senator Henry J. Allen, Kansas publisher, appearing as the principal speaker, a big turnout is assured at the dinner and get-together of the Republican Club of Massachusetts in Mechanics Hall Tuesday night, June 2. He will bring a special message from Governor Landon.

Former United States Senator Allen is also a former governor of Kansas and has agreed to speak at all rally prior to the state primary here in the interest of Landon's candidacy.

Another speaker will be former Congressman Charles M. Bakewell, professor at Yale University.

The gubernatorial and senatorial candidates of the party in Massachusetts will also appear.

There will be a military band and stags and radio talent will fill in between the speeches. It will be the opening gun of the 1936 campaign insofar as the Republican Club of Massachusetts is concerned.

PLAN THREE-DAY PARLEY

Republican interest in the campaign will be further fostered through the medium of a three-day session of the New England Young Republicans, starting next Friday at the Hotel Somerset.

Coming as it does so near the Republican National Convention, it is attracting attention, not only of young voters in this state, but in other sections of the country.

The five Republican candidates for the pre-primary convention nomination for governor and the presidents of the national and New England Young Republicans will hold the limelight on the opening night.

At the banquet on Saturday night, Congressman Joseph Martin of North Attleboro, slated to be the next Massachusetts national committeeman, will head the speakers.

Farley Sees Landon as G. O. P. Candidate

Providence, May 20—Governor Alf M. Landon will be the Republican presidential candidate, according to no less authority than Postmaster General James Farley.

Speaking at the state convention here of Rhode Island Democrats, the chairman of the Democratic national committee said:

"The Republican convention meditates the nomination of a doubtless estimable gentle man, however, was unheard of in a national sense until the minority party began to beat the bushes for a candidate."

200 Delegates Now Pledged to Landon

New York, May 20 (US)—Republican primaries in states throughout the country show Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas already has almost 200 delegates to the Republican national convention pledged to support him for the presidential nomination.

The Landon sweep in New Jersey brought to 182 the delegates actually pledged to the Kansas executive, and this total does not include scores more known to be favorable to his candidacy.

The 33 delegates from Massachusetts, for instance, are considered certain to support Landon, who achieved one of his most smashing primary victories in the Bay State, where he polled a vote 10 times greater than that of all other G. O. P. candidates combined.

The delegates definitely pledged to Landon now stand: Arkansas 1, Florida 9, Kansas 18, Kentucky 18, Missouri 20, New Jersey 32, New Mexico 6, Oklahoma 21, South Dakota 8, Tennessee 17, Virginia 11, West Virginia 15 and Wyoming 6.

There will be 1,001 votes at the Republican national convention in Cleveland next month with 501 votes necessary to select the party's standard bearer.

Landon 4-1 Winner in Jersey

in the case of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Colonel Henry Breckinridge, lone entry on the Democratic preference ballot, polled a relatively small vote.

His total for the 2366 districts was 25,371.

President Roosevelt, whose name was not on the ballot, got a sizable "write-in" vote which in places far exceeded that for Breckenridge. In Atlantic County 5402 persons penciled in the name of the President while only 879 checked the name of Breckinridge.

The Roosevelt vote was not tabulated generally, and in some places the Landon-Borah count was delayed while state and local contests were decided.

Hoffman led the "Big-Four" slate for many hours, aided by a plurality of 6000 over Fort in Democratic Hudson county, where Fort charged a deal was made with Mayor Frank Hague, Democratic leader, for "bullet" votes for the governor.

3 PASS HOFFMAN

But as populous Essex county, which includes Newark, turned in its vote, the tide turned and first former U. S. Senator Walter E. Edge, then Edward E. Duffield, Newark insurance executive, and finally National Committeewoman Edna B. Conklin passed the governor.

Even as the Hudson county voting showed evidence of "bullet" votes for Hoffman—a vote for him alone instead of four persons—so did some other counties show that he was "cut" by many voters.

Fort campaigned against the Governor because of the latter's activities in the Hauptmann case.

Tabulation of 527 of Essex's 576 districts gave Hoffman 31,225 and Fort 24,272. The Governor ran far behind his bracket mates in the county. Edge was high man with 61,155, Duffield next with 59,588 and Conklin third with 58,010.

Newark, industrial center of the county, gave the Governor 11,063 to Fort's 15,797, the suburbs, long productive of Republican pluralities, went to Fort, giving him 38,484 to Hoffman's 20,162. In both city and suburbs Hoffman trailed.

Few political observers conceded any chance of closing up the gap of more than 40,000 votes between him and the fourth-place governor, should the governor fail to better his present place in the complete tabulation of the state, observers said the prestige as titular leader of the party and its best vote-getter would be seriously impaired.

EDGE LEAD HELPS HIM

The 94 Democratic convention delegates elected are all hand-picked organization men and women, and are pledged to President Roosevelt. The delegation has 37 votes.

Their vote for Roosevelt will be solid, Mayor Hague having come out for the President's renomination days ago.

Edges' projection into the lead in the Republican delegate race put him in a position to once more assume an active part in party councils.

He has remained in the background since Hoffman was elected two years ago, although there has been mention of him as a vice-presidential possibility.

Wounded Youth Tells Of College Killing

swinging high for it with my foot.

"There was a report and I felt a stinging sensation in the sole of my foot and in my shoulder. "Then everything went black."

Other students rushing to the room of Somers found the eccentric proponent of radicalism from Meriden, Ct., dead with a bullet in his own brain. Henneberry, son of a Chicago manufacturer, slumped in death in a corner, and Harts unconscious on the floor.

Somers still clutched the .25-calibre mail order pistol he had received only yesterday morning.

VICTIMS LIE SIDE BY SIDE

As relatives sped here to claim them, the bodies of Somers and Henneberry lay side by side in an understanding parlor near which erstwhile comrades filed sorrowfully on their way to classes.

"The tragedy happened in a moment of mental derangement," declared Dr. Tyler Dennett, president of the college.

As versions of the tragedy passed about the campus began to assume proportions like those of a snowball rolling down a hill, many students recalled that Somers often had threatened to take his life.

A brilliant student in four of his five courses, Somers was deficient in mathematics and seemed to have been worrying over the final examination he was to have taken in that subject next week.

SOMERS CALLED MISFIT

Other freshmen, describing Somers as a moody misfit, pointed out that he eschewed the companionship of his classmates at meal times and ate alone instead in his room in the dormitory in which the triple shooting took place.

The shooting occurred in Lehman Hall, an elaborately appointed freshman dormitory donated a few years ago by Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York, one of the college's most distinguished alumni.

The building stands on the fringe of the campus less than 300 yards from the snow-white Colonial mansion which is the home of President Dennett, summoned to the murder room by telephone as soon as the bodies were discovered.

"The boy was eccentric for many years, but never violent," Dr. Dennett said of Somers after a preliminary investigation of the tragedy.

"He was moody and ate in his room, although the boys finally persuaded him to go to a dining club."

The energetic president, who wears his hair clipped short in a style popular among students throughout the country, was asked if Somers had ever expressed ill-feeling for Henneberry or Harts.

"There no basis for the shooting," he replied.

STUDENTS RUSH IN

Of the score or more students who heard the sound of the shots echoing through the dormitory corridors, first to reach the room were George H. Clyde, 18, of Santa Barbara, Cal., and Robert Young, also 18, of Scarsdale, N. Y.

Dr. Dennett and Dean Charles Roy Keller, Police Chief George H. Royal, State Trooper Lewis Perachi, State Detective Silas Smith and Medical Examiner James W. Bunce conducted an exhaustive investigation.

"The boy went crazy, shot the other two and then himself," declared Chief Royal.

Harts was taken to the college infirmary, where his wounds were treated by Dr. Norman B. MacWilliams. He gave police a complete account of the affair.

Somers, son of a Meriden lawyer, prepared for Williams at Wilbraham Academy and Taft School, where he was a brilliant student.

Henneberry and Harts, members of prominent Chicago families, attended Chicago Latin School before coming here.

LETTERS "STRANGE"

William Reynolds, junior adviser of freshmen, said Somers had promised to turn the mail order guns over to the dean after receiving them yesterday.

Henneberry's body will be taken to Chicago for burial. Somers' to Meriden, where his father, Lewis J. Somers, expressed the opinion his son's mind had given away under the strain of study.

Letters recently received from his son, he said, were "strange."

1 KILLED, 6 HURT IN PLANE DIVE

and North Haven, Vinal Haven and other islands, had expired today, Curtis F. Fowler, state airplane inspector said.

The seaplane had just taken off and was trying to make altitude when one wing crumpled, observers said.

Just over the harbor brenkwater, it halted in flight, like a wounded bird, spun over and plummeted.

As it hit the water the ship shattered. Montgomery apparently sunk with some of the wreckage. The pilot and the other five passengers clung desperately to pontoons.

RACE TO SCENE

Fishermen raced toward the rescue. The CG-89 was but a half-mile away. The crash was at 9:13 a. m. The patrol boat reached the scene at 9:18 a. m.

While fishermen were picking up one man, a dory put out from the CG-89 and took the others aboard.

Meanwhile patrol boats CG-155 and CG-58 were coming up.

Having transferred to the patrol boat the man saved by fishermen, the CG-89 put for the shore, where ambulances were waiting.

The remaining patrol boats sought for Montgomery's body. Divers were sent down at spots where the wreckage showed. Fishermen also aided.

OWNER AT SCENE

Boynton, who established a west-east transcontinental air record in 1930, when he was but 18 years old, was on the scene of the tragedy a few minutes after the crash.

He was unable to account for the plane cracking up, stating that it had been checked just before the take-off.

He has maintained a flying service here since 1930 and had distinguished himself in a number of "mercy" flights—transporting sick persons to hospitals.

EDITH ROGERS HAILS AMERICAN'S DRIVE

Inspired by the Boston Evening American's recent safety campaign, Edith Nourse Rogers, Congresswoman from Massachusetts, who introduced a bill into the House of Representatives seeking $50,000 appropriation for work of the general accident prevention committee, was jubilant today over the passage of the measure.

A telegram received by her reads:

"I know the Boston American will rejoice with me that my bill which authorized $50,000 appropriation to be expended under direction of Secretary of Commerce to promote national safety and accident prevention passed House of Representatives unanimously. Bill provides first real opportunity for getting at heart of problem in stopping tremendous toll of 100,000 deaths per year by accident.

"EDITH NOURSE ROGERS, "Member of Congress."

A dispatch from Washington states that the measure has been sent to the Senate where, it was said, it seems assured of immediate passage.

The committee, already set up by Secretary of Commerce Roper, would work with state agencies in devising legislation and other measure to prevent traffic accidents.

In a telephone message, Mrs. Rogers told the Boston American that she is particularly elated because she is one of the few Republicans to get unanimous endorsement from the House.

Under the plans drafted there will be 11 unite operating under the committee, embracing all kinds of accidents from air to street cars.

"The safety campaign carried on by the Boston American during the first months of this year was largely responsible for awakening the public to the appalling list of accidents," Mrs. Rogers said. "I want to congratulate you upon your zeal on behalf of the public."

It is not expected that the $50,000 will be sufficient to successfully carry out the campaign as planned, but Mrs. Rogers stated that it was the opening wedge looking to legislation which will make the committees a permanent institution with sufficient funds appropriated at each session of Congress for pursuing the work.

Ely Calls Deal Policy Wasteful

Worcester, May 20—The only policy of the Raw Dealers is spending! The Quoddy project is a "curiosity!" The Florida canal a joke!

Those and plenty of other cryptic phrases assailing the Washington administration sizzled from the tongue of former Governor Joseph B. Ely in an address before the National Economy League here.

He said the Quoddy "curiosity" might pay if people were charged a dollar apiece to look at it as a "wonder."

Scoring the relief program, he said:

"Jim Farley says the government relief program is worth 22,000,000 votes. Think of that! Each administration is given over to granting of favors and money for the benefit of certain groups.

"Taxation is the largest single item—the result of constantly increasing promises to the people. It's about time they woke up."

Murray's Death Ruled Natural

Alexander Murray of Wahan, whose funeral was interrupted by authorities just before the body was to have been cremated, died of natural causes, Medical Examiner Thomas Morton Gallagher reported today following an autopsy.

The autopsy was performed on order of District Attorney Warren L. Bishop, acting at the request of an attorney representing members of the Murray family.

Today the medical examiner said his autopsy revealed Murray to have been afflicted with cirrhosis of the liver, brain congestion and a cerebral hemorrhage.

"The matter is a closed book," announced Bishop.

Murray, 54 years old, died in Newton Hospital after a two-day illness. His physician, Dr. Herman Norton of Newton Center, conferred with the medical examiner before signing a death certificate giving the cause as cerebral hemhorrage

Mother to See Kasper Quads

Passaic, N. J., May 20 (INS)—Mrs. Emil Kasper will see her quadruplets for the first time just before she returns to her Little Ferry home today or early tomorrow.

Mrs. Kasper was rolled around St. Mary's Hospital in a wheel chair yesterday and was in calling distance of her babies, but was not allowed to see them.

Dr. Frank Jani said the babies would remain in St. Mary's until they are strong enough to be removed from the incubators.

KISSING School Story TOLD

GIRLS BARE TEACHER'S ACT

Andover, N. J., May 20 (INS)—Testimony taken at a public hearing May 6 on charges against R. Elwin Mattison, Andover's alleged "lissing schoolmaster," was made public today.

Mattison, who is married and a leader in the Boy Scouts, will go on trial before the board of education tomorrow night on charges that he hugged and kissed Carolyn McDavit, 15, blond sophomore.

He was alleged to have invited the girl to his office to discuss a design she was painting for a Boy Scout pamphlet.

Carolyn described Mattison's alleged advances at the hearing. Another witness, Edith Kent, testified Mattison tried to take liberties with her three years ago when she was 16

Tells of Kisses

Edith said she cried and Mattison took her home. Later, she claimed, he asked her to sign a paper stating he was "a perfect gentleman."

Carolyn testified:

"On March 11 I reached home at 3:30 p. m., and Margaret Cox told me Mr. Mattison wanted me at the school. When I entered his classroom, Mrs. Plant (the janitress) was present.

"Mrs. Plant left, and at 3:50 p. m. I started to go home.

Q.—What happened? A.—He put his arm around me. I thought it was just friendship, but when I got to the main door he turned around and kissed me a few times.

Q.—What happened later? A.—The Plant boy came up the lane. I couldn't see him but Mr. Mattison could. (The Plant boy is a grandson of the janitress.) Mr. Mattison then let me go. Later he came over to my house. My mother, brother and I were there. Mother asked him to apologize. He said he would humbly apologize, and take the blame that I would put on him."

Didn't Scream

Q.—When he swung you around and kissed you—why didn't you scream? A.—There was nobody around.

Carolyn's sister, Lucy, told how she advised her sister to tell her mother of the incident.

Lucy testified: "On March 14 I was upstairs and Carolyn came and said to me, 'Lou, I don't want to go school with Mr. Mattison. All he wants me for is to kiss me and be ungentlemanly with his hands. If I tell mother, it will put the family all worked up, but I would like to do something, without causing any trouble.' I told Carolyn to tell mother."

Edith Kent was recalled and asked: Did he ask you to sign a paper? A.—He did. On the paper was a statement that he was a perfect gentleman at all times.

Q.—Did you sign it? A.—No, I told him I didn't want to sign any false statements.

Q.—Did he ever get fresh with you? A.—Yes, he did, three winters ago.

"Then I Cried"

Q.—What did he do? A.—Must I tell? (She is directed to tell by counsel.) He wanted something and I would not give it to him. I had been out with him before and he had been a perfect gentleman and, of course, I expected him to be that all the time—but he wasn't.

Q.—You made no complaint? A.—No. I cried and he took me home.

Anderson Mickerly, Mattison's lawyer, placed five character witnesses on the stand. All said the school principal bore an "excellent reputation." The defense also put a young girl friend of Carolyn's, Elsa Lindstrom, on the stand, who admitted she had gossiped about Mattison.

Q.—You had discussed with other girls that Mr. Mattison had hugged and kissed somebody? A.—Yes, I did.

Q.—Did you pass the story to Carolyn? A.—I did.

Victim of Attack Still Likes Dogs

MALDEN BOY WANTS TO SEE GREYHOUNDS

"Dog is man's best friend."

And despite scars that he will probably bear to his grave testifying to a cruel attack by three racing dogs when his little body was nearly torn from limb to limb, six-year-old Bobby Nelson still feels that way about it.

At least, Prince, his eight-year-old German police dog, and Lady, a four-year-old Boston terrier, are his closest playmates.

And Bobby doesn't hold any particular prejudice against greyhounds either.

"I'm goin' to see them again this summer, if they come around here to live," said Robert today at his home on Broadway, Malden.

"They didn't mean to hurt me."

This is a large order of forgiveness because Bobby is sensitive about those scars he bears on his right arm and legs.

"He won't wear short sleeves," his mother confided to the reporter.

"He doesn't want anyone to see the scares," she said.

"I don't think I'll ever get him to wear a bathing suit because of the marks on his legs.

Bobby was attacked last October by three racing greyhounds while they were being exercised by their trainer.

He was rushed to the Maplewood Hospital, in Malden, where for a time he wavered between life and death.

Two hundred stitches were taken in his mutilated body.

(Pictures from International News Photograph Service)

Even though he will carry scars from dog bites for the rest of his life, Bobby Nelson of Malden still holds on to his faith in the friendship of dogs for man. He is not even prejudiced against racing greyhounds—three of which badly bit him last year, so that for three weeks Bobby hovered between life and death. Prince, pet police dog, is Bobby's pal.

POWER Of Women GROWS

FIRST LADY GIVES VIEWS

Washington, May 20 (US)—More women than ever before will be delegated to the party conventions this June, and they will be women strong in their political power, says Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Since 1920, when she said it was like "pulling hen's teeth" to get women appointed delegates to the conventions, women have been moving up like the wary queen on the political chess board.

Today, with increasing political activity of women, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"They are obtaining more political consideration and more political power. And as time goes on women will have more opportunity to be heard and to be heard with interest."

Speaking of the Democratic party, Mrs. Roosevelt says she believed there might be a chance for women on the platform committee this year. And she said there would be a great opportunity for women to present planks to the committees of both parties.

Mrs. Roosevelt will not go to the Democratic convention next month. Asked off-handedly whether she would go to the notification ceremony afterwards, she said:

"That depends on what happens."

Plans Shift

The First Lady's entire summer, including her vacation, "will depend on my husband," she said, adding:

"It's very good training for people in public life to be able to change all their plans at any time and to make all their plans on a provisional basis.

"It's strange what changes can happen to you in a lifetime. When I was a young girl we knew exactly what day we were moving to the country and what day we were coming back. Everything was set and planned for according to schedule."

She said her uncertain days and hectic program of recent years "much more wearing," but at the same time "much more interesting," though she admitted she was "not always pleasant about it," but she tried to be. She said:

"Sometimes I would give anything to live on a fixed schedule."

Tomorrow Mrs. Roosevelt will join the President in entertaining the Disabled Veterans of the World War at a White House lawn party.

Sunday Mrs. Roosevelt will leave Washington for a year, spending May 25 and 26 in Cornell, N. Y., and May 29, in New York City, where she will broadcast for the Federation of Women's Clubs, go to a recital where her grandchild, "Sistie" Dall, will play, and later attend a tea at the Arts and Industries Exhibit.

Though she declared she herself had never tried to keep track of the miles she covered during her various jaunts about the country, it was brought out that she has traveled more than 35,000 miles in the past year.

RICH Air Pioneer KILLED

WILLIAMS DIES LIKE WEDELL

Baton Rouge, La., May 20 (AP)—Crash of a speedy plane into a wooded swampland, brought death today to Harry P. Williams, millionaire aviator and husband of Marguerite Clark, star of the silent screen.

Johnny "Red" Worthen, a veteran pilot, rode to death with the 47-year-old lumberman and aviation enthusiast shortly after they took off from the Baton Rouge airport for Patterson, La., late last night.

Worthen was employed by Williams but the wealthy sportsman was a competent pilot and it was not known who was at the controls when the plane failed to gain altitude and slipped into a dive.

The men apparently met instant death. Their badly broken bodies were thrown clear of the plane and landed 20 feet apart. The plane did not burn but an exploding gasoline tank seared a nearby tree.

To Claim Bodies

The bodies were brought to Baton Rouge and an inquest was ordered. R. G. Broussard, airport manager, unable to explain the tragedy, said he notified the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Department of Commerce and expected an investigation.

Mrs. Williams was expected today to claim the body of her husband.

In 1918 when Miss Clark was at the height of her film fame, Williams wooed and won the petite red-haired actress, who retired from the movies to devote herself to her home and social interests in New Orleans.

In 1926, Williams met Jimmy Wedell, a barnstorming aviator, and began an association which carried Wedell to fame before he preceded his employer to death in an air crash in 1934.

With Williams supplying the money, Wedell, his brother, Walter, and Worthen built the Wedell-Williams air service which became one of the nation's largest private flying services.

Jimmy designed and built many racers at the Patterson plant and capped his string of speed successes by flying to a world record

Eugene Field Widow Needy Seeks Aid

St. Louis, May 20 (AP)—The 80-year-old widow of a gay poet, whose "Little Boy Blue" has delighted American children for four decades, today called on friends and admirers of her late husband to help her save her Wisconsin farm from foreclosure.

Mrs. Eugene Field, whom most of the world, including close students of her husband's works, supposed to be dead, sent an appeal from a sick bed at Hartford Junction, Wis., for a loan of $3000 to prevent confirmation of a mortgage sale which would take her 160-acre farm from her.

Through her son, Eugene II, she made known her plight in a letter to Jesse P. Henry of St. Louis, foremost collector of "Fieldiana" and leader in a campaign to restore Field's boyhood home here as a shrine.

"It might be possible to find someone in St. Louis who would advance $3000, which would give mother time to refinance her property," the younger Eugene Field wrote.

He said he had invested all her money here, about $50,000, and that her dilemma was a result of being unable to obtain a loan.

"This letter was my first intimation that Mrs. Field was even living," Henry said. "I had supposed she was dead many years ago."

In 1930 Mrs. Field reported valuable original manuscripts of her husband's stocks apparently had been stolen.

She said they included "The Love Affairs of a Bibliomanic" and "Over the Hills and Far Away." The widow had refused $7500 for the latter manuscript.

Incredible

Montgomery, Ala., May 20 (AP)—F. J. Smith and A. R. Felts caught a catfish, but a skeptical editor—wise in the ways of fishermen—suggested the fish be weighed to verify the claim it scaled 67 pounds.

On the city's master scales the fish was found to be five pounds greater than Smith and Felts had claimed.

Color Beauty Film To Be Shown Here

The mysteries and tricks of make-up will be revealed for milady's enlightenment at a showing of the new color film, "The Cosmetic Urge," at William Filene's Sons Company tomorrow.

Carola de Peyster Kip, cosmetics editor of Harper's Bazaar, will lecture as the film is shown at 12:30 and 2:30 p. m.

Part of the film is devoted to the subject of "How to Take the Inches Off."

Among the tricks of the trade that will be explained are how to make eyelashes look darker and thicker without resorting to false lashes, how to put on powder so it will stay on, how to apply lip rouge with a camel's hair brush, such as an artists uses, and how to repair defects in nail polish.

In the cast of the film are many beautiful girls, some famous models and some New York debutantes.

Watchman's Shots Rout 3 Thieves

Surprising a trio of cigarette thieves, who were attempting to raid a freight car in the New Haven yards, opposite Northern avenue in South Boston today Edward E. Kelley, a railroad policeman, shot it out with the men, forcing them to flee to a parked sedan.

Accosting the men at the side of the car, he demanded to know their business, when they opened fire on him. He returned the fire, sending four bullets toward them. He thinks he wounded at least one, but all were able to run, urged on by further bullets from his gun.

Reaching the car, the men continued to reply to the shots, many of the slugs chogging into the ground all about the officer, but he was unhit.

Nahant Tax Rate Boosted $2 to $36

Nahant's tax rate for 1936 is $36, the highest in the town's history and an increase of $2 over last year's rate. The highest previous rate was $35.60 in 1934.

Robert Telford, chairman of the board of assessors, in making the announcement, attributed the higher rate to an appropriation increase of $5000, loss of revenue through decreased personal and real estate valuation and an increase in state and county taxes.

Northampton Woman Wins $10,000

A Northampton woman is announced as winner of first prize in a national contest held by the Quaker Oats Company.

The winner, Mrs. J. L. Donaldson, receives $10,000.

With the Pionne quintuplets rating first interest in the world, and with Quaker Oats their favorite breakfast cereal, the Quaker Oats Company launched a $10,000 Dream Home contest.

The contest subject was:

"Which of the Quins Would I Adopt?"

Mrs. Donaldson chose Marie.

Mrs. Donaldson was asked what she would do with the money.

"Things have been pretty lean for my husband and me, so we'll make safe investments toward the future.

"I would like to take a trip to Callander, Ontario, to see those five darling babies, and may do so on my vacation."

12 EXTORTION PLOTS SIFTED BY FOLEY

Following leads which it is believed will link a huge extortion ring operating from New York, with at least 12 Boston victims, District Attorney William J. Foley conferred today with Assistant District Attorney Harold W. Hastings and Special Investigator Thomas E. Dewey in New York.

Evidence now in the hands of the district attorney indicates that one prominent Boston man was victimized for at least $100,000 and that others have been muscled by the extortion ring reputed to have numbered among its victims Alfred E. Smith, Jr., and Joseph E. Wynne, stepson of Dr. Shirley Wynne, former health commissioner of New York.

MOVE TO CUT RING

The move of the district attorney to cut the tenacles of the Luciano vice ring followed a conference here between Commissioner McSweeney, Superintendent Edward Fallon and Captain James F. Daley of the Warren avenue station on vice conditions.

The connection of the Luciano vice ring with Boston vice houses in the investigation that followed a vice raid in Westland avenue, Back Bay, was charged after a girl revealed that she had been transported from state to state in a white slave ring.

PAYMENTS TO AGENTS

Following leads uncovered at that time the names of 12 prominent Boston people were linked with the payment of various sums to agents of the ring.

Meanwhile today, Captain James F. Daley of Warren avenue station conferred with his newly-organized South end vice squad toward a new drive in that district.

The squad, organized three weeks ago, is made up of Sergeants John J. Devine and William H. Foley and Special Officers John F. Kelly and Bernard W. Fay.

In that time it has secured 44 vice convictions in court, 31 for registering bets and convictions against six questionable houses.

ONE SHOT, TWO HURT IN CHASE OF AUTO

Police pursuit of a stolen car ended in Jamaica Plain today with one alleged auto thief shot, two others injured in the wreck of the machine. The victims were all from Dorchester.

Edwin Jurdiejcz, 21, of Clapp street, was wounded in the abdomen by a police bullet when he fled the scene, refusing to halt for a warning shot.

John Smolenski of Rawson street, who was to have gone on trial in superior court today for an auto theft two months ago, was pinned in the wreckage as the stolen car overturned, and suffered fractures of the shoulder and collar bone and internal injuries.

Frank Smolenski, his brother, was bruised, cut and shaken.

GUARDED AT HOSPITAL

The captured trio was placed under police guard at City Hospital.

Officers William Ahearn and Joseph Cotu patrolling Glover street in a police car, said they saw the youths acting suspiciously near a parked car. When the prowl car approached the trio jumped into the machine and fled.

The chase led through Washington street, Hyde Park avenue, Forest Hills square and into Brookside avenue, Jamaica Plain. At Brookside avenue the fleeing car swerved an. overturned.

The Smolenski brothers were pinned in the front o the machine. Jurkiewics jumped from the back seat and ran. While Officer Ahearn was extricating the two from the wrecked car, Officer Cotu pursued Jurkiewics.

FIRES SHOT

He fired one shot to halt the fugitive and when he continued to run brought him down with a bullet through the hip.

John Smolenski was arrested on March 16 after a similar chase during which police fired 20 shots. He was at liberty on bail of $1000 pending trial today.

Police said the wrecked stolen car was the property of Dominick J. Albertazzi of Virginia street, Dorchester.

Maclaurin Joins Tech Staff

RUPERT MacLAURIN

He is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1929, and in 1933 joined the staff of the Harvard Business School as research assistant in investment management. He was appointed instructor in business economics in 1935 and received the degree of doctor of commercial science last February.

He has spent much time studying in foreign universities. He studied Italian and archeology in the American Academy in Rome and was a member of the academy's archeological expedition to Greece and Crete. During his visit to South America he crossed the Andes on skis.

STUDENTS FLAY DEAL POLICY IN OKLAHOMA

Norman, Okla., May 20 (US)—Spendthrift policies of the Democratic administration coupled with threatened changes in the Constitution brought a storm of protest from student groups at the University of Oklahoma today.

"Thinking students agree that the administration has jeopardized America's economic and political welfare," declared William Clayton, business student in the University.

HIT EXTRAVAGANCE

"The oppressive financial extravagance of the New Deal organization will prevent this nation from returning to normal, sane condition for several decades," Clayton maintained.

"On all sides youth sees its future mortgaged with gigantic expenditures—many of which are used only as a means of building up Farley's political machinery.

"Youth cannot but feel that Roosevelt has gained his personal political ends at the expense of the young generation which is just reaching its voting maturity."

BACK CONSTITUTION

A. G. Brown, staff member of the Daily Oklahoman and student of journalism, was vehement in his condemnation of threatened constitutional changes.

"Mr. Roosevelt's advisors have revealed their contempt for the constitution and I believe are planning drastic changes in the event of his re-election," stated Brown. "A study of the New Deal's 'master minds' and their records gives only an inkling of what will probably happen if they succeed in scrapping that historic document which means liberty to the American people."

QUINCY AWAITS LAUNCHING

Quincy will be host tomorrow to a delegation of citizens from Vincennes, Ind., arriving to attend the launching of the new U. S. cruiser Vincennes at the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation.

Many public officials as well as private citizens will accompany the sponsor, Miss Harriet Virginia Kimmel, daughter of Mayor Joseph W. Kimmell of Vincennes.

The new Cruiser Vincennes is the second American warship to bear that name. The first one was completed shortly after the war of 1812, and was a three-masted wooden ship. She was for many years the flagship of the explorer, Capt. Charles Wilkes, the first American ever to sight the Antarctic continent.

The Cruiser Vincennes is a sister ship to the Quincy, which was launched June 19, 1935, and represents the latest designs in a heavy cruiser.

CRIME TESTS PUZZLE BAR

The announced plan of Attorney General Homer Cummings to make Boston a "try-out" city, not for motion pictures or stage productions but for mental tests of persons accused of crimes ranging from misdemeanor to murder, had Boston attorneys dusting off their law books today.

The experiment, ordered by the attorney-general, will be put into effect next week in the Federal Court. Under existing state laws, defendants can be subject only to sanity tests when the crime charged called for death.

Under the new ruling, as far as Boston lawyers have been able to determine, any accused person can be examined as to his sanity.

The experiment, according to advices from Washington, is designed to eliminate the confusion resulting from clashing testimony by defense and prosecution alienists.

Sent to Jail For Threat On Queen

The Hague, May 20 (US)—A Dutch Communist's suggestion that he was ready to assassinate Queen Wilhelmina brought him a one-year prison sentence at the termination of a trial that shocked the Netherlands.

It was testified that the Communist, named Houtman, wrote the leader of the Dutch Communist Party, asking for a revolver to shoot the 55-year-old sovereign, who for 45 years has given the Netherlands and its colonial empire of 68,000,000 people a reign of peace.

The affection and warmth of the Dutch people for their beloved queen, the world's only woman ruler, was outraged by the evidence adduced at the trial and the nation rang with denunciations of the leniency of the sentence.

$15,000 HOLDUP TRIAL OPENS

Three South Boston youths, alleged to have been the bandits who held up the Keith-Boston Theater on the night of February 23 and obtained more than $15,000, went on trial today in superior court before Judge John E. Swift and a jury.

The defendants are Charles Majcewics, 22, of Tudor street; George Stockman, 22, and Daniel Hurley, 22, both of West Third street.

Majcewics, who was arrested in a restaurant opposite the theater a few hours after the holdup and who sat today in a separate cage, apart from the other two defendants, is charged with robbery while armed, carrying a dangerous weapon and receiving stolen goods.

The other two are charged with robbery while armed and carrying a dangerous weapon.

When arrested, Majcewics had $2700, but the rest of the money has never been recovered.

Majcewics is represented by Attorney Stanley Rogocius of South Boston, while Stockman and Hurley have Attorney Daniel Gallagher as counsel.

Assistant District Attorney Edward M. Sullivan is prosecuting.

Find Broken Safe in Cambridge Lot

Cambridge police found a small dark green safe, its door blown open, in a lot at Rogers and Third streets, East Cambridge, today.

There was no name or other identifying mark and police had no complaints of such a strongbox having been stolen, so they broadcast the find on the teletype system.

The safe measures 14 by 14 by 17 inches. It is being examined for fingerprints.

CAMPBELL TRAPPED AFTER 2-DAYS WATCH

G-MEN SEIZED HIM WITHOUT KARPIS' AID

(This is the fourth and last article of the exclusive series telling how the G-men wiped out the list of the nation's public enemies.)

By WIN BROOKS

It has been widely believed that Alvin Karpis gave the information that led to the arrest of his last remaining lieutenant-at-large, Harry Campbell, caught at Toledo, O., six days after "Old Creepy" was snared at New Orleans.

This is not so. The two seizures had no connection. Karpis "no spik English" when the agents grilled him about Campbell.

Besides, the G-men, knew at the time of Karpis' arrest that Campbell was hiding in or near Toledo.

The postoffice inspectors, after Campbell for the $35,000 mail robbery at Garrstaville, O., had been close on his trail for some time and the two federal agencies were co-operating.

G-men generally believed that Campbell had escaped them by fleeing the Florida home where Fred and "Ma" Barker were slain a day before the gun fight there. They also knew he had escaped with Karpis when the pair shot their way through officers in an Atlantic City Hotel, kidnaped a doctor and fled in his machine.

Hoover on Job

A postoffice inspector occupied a room in Campbell's apartment house in Toledo for two days before s arrest, not certain that the n under surveillance was the ght gangster, but not letting him ot sight.

Information that came into possession of the federal bureau of investigation from an informer corroborated the suspicions of the mail sleuths.

Hoover was notified and again he took a plane. With him flew Clyde Tolson, an assistant who had been with him in New Orleans. The seats they occupied on the plane were numbered "7" and "11", hunch naturals.

At Toledo, Hoover took command of the situation. Before the federal men moved, every step of the three preceding days was rechecked and a visit to a Toledo hospital where "Limping Harry" had gone for treatment convinced them that the man under surveillance was the man they wanted.

The federal unit went into action just before daybreak. It is an hour when even haunted desperate criminals are at the low ebb of resistance.

With machine guns, pistols and tear gas bombs, the agents surrounded the Campbell apartment house, entered by key and burst into Campbell's room.

Jerked from slumber, the public enemy sat up in bed, trembling. The bed-clothing was pulled off him. Hoover said quietly:

"The show's over, Cambell. Get up."

Feared G-Men

Trembligly, he obeyed and was ironed. Two guns were found in his room, one close to his pillow.

Like Karpis he admitted having been in deadly fear that the G-men would shoot him first and order him to put up his hands afterwards.

Hoover led a second raid that day, capturing Sam Coker, also wanted for the Garrstaville mail stick-up. The information as to Coker's whereabouts came from Campbell.

Campbell swiftly pleaded guilty to the Bremer kidnaping and was sentenced to life imprisonment, taken to Leavenworth to cool off before being shipped to Alcatraz.

The far-flung agencies of the G-men struck in another place that same day of Campbell's capture and the new Public Enemy No. 1 was uncrowned.

Across the continent, at San Francisco, William Mahan came to the end of his trail and found the special agents waiting for him there.

Mahan was the only member at large of the trio that kidnaped 7-year-old George Weyerhaeuser, of Tacoma, and extracted a $200,000 ransom for his freedom.

Harmon L. Waley, and his blonde, young wife, Margaret, tools of Mahan, had earlier been taken and sentenced to federal prisons.

Mahan was shrewd, perhaps the shrewdest of the latter-day public enemies.

For nearly a year he led the special agents a zig-zag chase along the west coast. The ransom bills

Trail of Money

Hoover knew that Mahan was constantly on the move to escape the pursuing G-men and he knew also that Mahan, unless he resorted to a new crime, could not finance his flight without drawing on the $100,000 which was his share of the ransom money.

The department knew he had $100,000 because the Waleys had talked. Mahan had short-changed them in a division of the spoils; their own $90,700 had been recovered in a canyon hiding place.

The Mahan hunt settled down to a constant watch for the ransom bills. Once they led as far east as Butte, Mont., and there the fugitive escaped the G-men by a margin as thin as one of the bills he was putting in circulation.

Back to the west coast led the money trail zig-zagging from Seattle to San Fransico to a score of smaller communities along the California waterfront.

It was in Seattle that Mahan first began altering the numbers of the ransom bills. He did this with ink, changing a "3" to an "8", a "1" to a "4."

By this means he managed to avoid detection by those on whom he passed the bills but they were immediately spotted by bank tellers on the watch and traced to their sources.

Used 4 Autos

For more than a month after fleeing Seattle when he discovered the bills were being traced, Mahan refrained from passing more. Then his need became urgent and he began passing out the tell-tale bills again.

In and around San Francisco the bills began to pop up.

Knowing the fugitive must be traveling by automobile, the G-men covered every garage and parking lot in San Francisco and its environs. Attendants at these places were shown pictures of Mahan, given circulars, told what to do if they encountered him.

The agents suspected Mahan of having two cars, parked in separate areas. In reality he had four, each under a different and bogus name.

The "break" came as a result of the patient instruction of garage attendants and parking lot employes. A youth, working at a parking lot in Minna street, San Francisco, between 6th and 7th aveues, believed he recognized a picture of Mahan as a recent patron at his lot.

Two days later the man drove to the same lot again and parked his car.

As he turned the ignition key and the motor was killed, he felt a gun against his head and heard a voice say:

"Okay, Mahan. Just don't move.

G-men materialized out of thin air. The door of the car was opened and Mahan was made to step out with his hands crossed over his head. In his coat pocket a gun was found, in a pocket of the door beside the car wheel another; both were loaded and at cock.

In his car, his pockets and in his room, to which he directed his captors, was found $37,000 of the ransom money.

Mahan was on his way to Tacoma before the world was notified of his capture. He was on his way to prison for 60 years before the world was notified he admitted the crime. In his case, 60 years is tantamount to life.

Mahan's arrest left only one name on the list of major public enemies, Thomas H. Robinson, Jr.

Robinson, unlike all the others, was a lone worker without gang connections. He had a "super-ego" complex that was not exactly a psychosis but pretty close to it.

By tracking him down, the G-men proved that they did not have to rely on underworld tips to get their men.

The usual routine methods of running down gangsters availed nothing in Robinson's case after he kipnaped Mrs. Alice Speed Stell of Louisville and escaped with $50,000 ransom.

Robinson moved in "opposites" to the usual fugitive.

He used trains and planes, lived in the best hotels. For a time, this and his female disguise enabled him to avoid detection.

Plane Undoing

When every routine means of capturing him was exhausted without result, G-men seized upon Robinson's flair for impersonating women as one that might eventually lead him into the toils.

There are four cities where female impersonators occasionally gather in such numbers as to make themselves objectionable as a group. Two of these are on the Atlantic seaboard, one in the middle west, the other is on the west coast.

Close watches were kept by the special agents in each of these cities, in haunts men in female clothing frequented.

By this means they picked up his trail, learned he had been in each of the four cities.

The Stoll kidnaper, like Mahan, was using ransom money and with some of it he chartered a plane in the middle west and flew to the Pacific Coast. This proved to be his undoing. The bills were spotted, traced to the depositor who told of his air passenger and destination.

Robinson's trail was picked up in Glendale, Calif., and federal agents learned that a female impersonator was living in a certain house.

They learned this without any outside aid and the story told by the Pasadena soda clerk, that he tipped the agents to Robinson's whereabouts, is a misconstruction of what actually happened. He did tip G-men to the movements of a female impersonator but the man proved not to be Robinson.

Robinson was under surveillance constantly for two days before the G-men were sure of his identity and placed him under arrest.

The third day after his capture, the last of the major public enemies had begun a life sentence.

Although State Administrator Edwards was in Washington, other officials stated it was impossible to see how these cut can be reinstated.

"The order to cut those workers is a national order and it is impossible to reinstate those dismissed. As it was, Massachusettts made its cut later than any other state," said one official.

FOR SLEEPLESS MAN!
Mansfield Told of Insomnia Cure
Mayor Mansfield today revealed the contents of a letter he received recently asking him to get in touch with a "United States millionaire who was unable to sleep nights."
The unusual letter came from a Miss A. E. Dyson of Fitzroy street, Cambridge, Eng., stating that she had read recently in the England Daily Mirror of a United States millionaire who was unable to sleep.
"I wonder if you can get in touch with him," the letter continued, and goes on prescribing a remedy for sleepless millionaires.
The remedy follows:
"I think of a verse from the Bible beginning with A—'All ye like sheep who have gone satray,' then begin with B—'Blessed are the pure in heart'—and so on alphabetically.
"Before I halfway through the alphabet I am asleep. I should be very pleased to pass my test on to him if you would let me know his address," Miss Dyson concluded.
Mayor Mansfield told reporters that he would be only too glad to hear from any sleepless millionaires and forward their letters to Miss Dyson.

Society Workers Discuss Social Work at Luncheon

By BETTY ALDEN

THE ACTIVITIES of the social world are very much like a lavish stage production . . . with music, beautiful gowns, dancing girls and elaborate sets . . . catching everyone's attention . . .

Yet behind the colorful theatrical productions are men and women . . . directors, stage hands and others, who work quietly in the background . . . and though we see the result of their work, we are hardly ever conscious of their presence . . .

CARRIE NEAL AUGUSTINE

Society also had its crews of serious laborers . . . working quietly behind the scenes of the brilliant fanfare of parties and dances . . .

These are the girls who act as volunteer workers and put in many hours at the city's various social agencies . . . They work in such an efficient, unassuming manner that we almost forget about them, except once every spring when they have their luncheon and discussion of the latest trends in social service work . . .

Though to the average person, social service sounds like a dull and boring subject to discuss on a beautiful spring afternoon, yesterday's luncheon was very gay and interesting . . . Mrs. Edward Warren was pretty as a picture as she presided and introduced the speakers . . . she has a gentle, calm manner which appeals to all her listeners, and she looked very nice in navy blue with a deep yoke of embroidered marquisette . . . Mrs. George Bemis was at the head table with her and so were Joy Kimball, settlement chairman of the Junior League and Grace Dalton, president of the Proparvulis Club . . .

Plenty of the girls there were the ones we often see in their social butterfly roles, and how they find time to work five and six hours a day in hospitals and still keep their "line" up-to-date and be the darlings of the stag line into the wee small hours is more than we can see . . .

Jean Gordon was in the midst of an animated group of volunteers from the Boston Dispensary . . . and wore an all black outfit with a Medici straw hat giving her a very individual appearance . . . Anne Howard, who had the lavish coming out party last autumn at the Casino in Magnolia, Carrie Neal Augustine, Grace Nelson, Eline Sortwell and Betty Swift were the others whose faithful and thoughtful work at the Dispensary makes life a little brighter for others . . .

Mrs. Charles Cabot and Priscilla Bramhall, Mrs. Julian Coolidge, Mrs. Palfrey Perkins in a navy blue outfit, Mrs. Edward Cabot also in blue, though a lighter shade and flowered, Miss Marian Homans, Betty Dumaine, Gertrude Peabody of Milton, Rachael Warner, Mrs. John A. Greene, and Miss Harriet Robeson were among the many others we noticed . . .

Visiting Doctors' Wives Entertained

DOCTORS' WIVES often complain that their lot is almost as bad as that of the proverbial "golf widows" . . . with their husbands so frequently called away from the family fireside to attend a clinic or scientific meeting . . . So they, like the other wives, have had to become pretty much accustomed to amusing themselves . . .

However, for a change, the wives of the doctors who are attending the A. U. A. annual convention here, are having their entertainment all mapped out for them and it seems as if every minute was taken up with one or another interesting event . . .

Yesterday afternoon they visited Mrs. Jack Gardner's Palace, Boston's famous show place, and then were entertained at tea in the palace's beautiful courtyard garden by wives of Boston doctors who are serving as hostesses to the out of town visitors . . . Mrs. Gardner Monks, representing the museum, Mrs. J. Dellinger Barney, Mrs. George Gilbert Smith, Mrs. Sidney Burwell, wife of the dean of the Harvard Medical School, and Mrs. Morris Carter were the pourers at the tea . . . Today they are visiting historic spots in Concord and Lexington and in the evening they will lure their husbands away from scientific discussions long enough to attend the dinner at the Statler . . . Incidentally, this is the first times that wives have been guests at the doctors' annual banquet so they have arranged to make it a dinner dance.

MacDowell Night at the Pops

ONE OF THE MOST pleasant features for music lovers who attend the MacDowell Night at the Pops Sunday evening, will be the presence in the audience of the composer's wife, Mrs. Edward MacDowell, who is coming down from Peterboro at the invitation of Miss Helen Ranney, president of the MacDowell Club of Boston . . .

Among society's most enthusiastic followers of MacDowell's music and the fine work his wife is doing in helping to make good music available to those who yearn for it, who will be on hand to greet her Sunday evening are Mrs. Roland Nickerson, Mrs. Arthur W. Rice, Miss Elizabeth Weld, Mrs. Delano Putnam, Mrs. A. H. Ladd, Mrs. Philip De Normandie, and Mrs. Lincoln Filene . . . Miss Rebekah Hobbs, Miss Catherine Cunningham Gray and Mrs. Adolf Leeds are making plans for this very worthwhile musical event . . .

Emmanuel Party Planned Saturday

Philanthropic-minded older folk are lending an interesting note to the rather dull late spring season.

Saturday afternoon will prove rather a busy day for the Emmanuel League when a party will take place in the Emmanuel College auditorium in the Fenway. Mrs. John A. Minahan chairmans the committee assisted by Mrs. John J. Nyban.

A cake table is being planned by Mrs. John J. Quirk and Mrs. Dennis J. McCarthy is in charge of the refreshments.

Contract, pivot and progressive bridge will be played under the direction of Mrs. Edward Connors, Mrs. Thomas A. Dolan, Mrs. John J. Attridge, Mrs. John J. O'Neill and Mrs. Alvan H. Bixby.

Donations will be accepted by an active group which includes Mrs. Francis P. Brennan, Mrs. William W. Cahill, Mrs. James W. Carr, Mrs. Dolphus Langlois and Mrs. Edward J. Pond.

Door committee includes Mrs. Marguerite Maguire, Mrs. William J. Prendergast, Mrs. D. J. Casey, Mrs. J. Chevezie, Mrs. Thomas A. Cronin, Mrs. Edward J. Danning, Mrs. William E. Doyle, Mrs. Joseph L. Duffy and Mrs. Frank Finn.

NOTRE DAME Alumnae to Greet International Federation

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)
MRS. EDWARD MARKEY MRS. JOHN BARRY MRS. JOSEPH LEARY

WHEN THE International Federation of Catholic Alumnae meets at Roxbury Academy of Notre Dame Sunday afternoon they will be greeted by an attractive trio of the school's alumnae—Mrs. Edward Markey of Brockton, Mrs. John Barry of West Roxbury and Mrs. Joseph Leary of Milton. Mrs. William H. Ellis, active in affairs of the federation, is general chairman of the day.

Framingham Benefit

Many very doleful looking cows standing in small lifeboats have come cruising into the dooryards of homes around Framingham and Framingham Center during the last few days.

They have arrived on the front of sea green invitation forms, to bring in their complacent way, the announcement that the S. S. Bovinia will sail from the Village Hall dock on the evening of May 29. The passage money for this four-hour maiden voyage will benefit the Framingham Babies' Milk Fund. There will be dancing on all decks and an elaborate entertainment in the Grand Salon.

The youthful members of the crew have been working day and night to get the beefy old scow ready for the launching. Dorothy Hengisch, the captain, has given out orders, and Bob's Margaret McSweeney has already piped all hands on deck to several teas, where plans and arrangements were discussed. Mrs. Adnah Neybart is honorary supercargo for the voyage, and the other members of the crew are Janet McConville, Mary Bennett, Marjorie Hodder, Howard Bennett and Eleanor Bianci, deck hands, and Jack Eastman, cabin boy.

On the distinguished list of patronesses for this affair, which is, of course, a dance and entertainment for the benefit of the Babies' Milk Fund are, Mrs. Reginald W. Bird, Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Mrs. John Eastman, Mrs. Charles Pettit, Mrs. Charles H. Macomber, Mrs. John Eastman, Mrs. Edward H. Angier, Mrs. Sanford O. Baldwin, Mrs. Charles G. Bancroft, Mrs. Frank A. Barbour, Mrs. Enos H. Bigelow, Mrs. Edward W. Blodgett, Mrs. Charles A. Brown Mrs. Frank Comerford, Mrs. George Frost, Mrs. Bartol Parker, Mrs. Robert Perkins, Mrs. George Scott, Mrs. Schuyler Van Ness and Mrs. Arthur St. John Whiting.

Society Notes

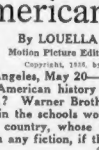
Warners Will Film American History

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 20—Wouldn't you have enjoyed studying American history by having it visualized on the screen? Warner Brothers are convinced the boys and girls in the schools would learn much more about their own country, whose dramatic story is more exciting than any fiction, if they could see it as a motion picture.

They have already completed "Song of the Nation," dealing with the writing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by Francis Scott Key, for release July 4. And now other colorful episodes in American History have been selected for shorts.



"The Hoosier Youth," dealing with Lincoln's boyhood, the Louisiana Purchase, the Alexander Hamilton—Aaron Burr duel, all of the Alamo and the Declaration of Independence are some of the subjects to be made in technicolor. Not only the school children but grownups as well will want to see this series.

Eddie Sutherland, the director, for a long time head man in Loretta Young's life, is zooming eastward in time to catch the Hindenburg Zeppelin for Europe. He will be the first Hollywoodite to make a trip direct to London by air and one of the few people ever to have flown abroad. He has a business engagement in London and because he has to be back at the Paramount studio by June 14 to direct "The Champagne Waltz," haste is imperative. All Hollywood today was thrilled at the popular Eddie being a passenger on the Hindenburg's trip and I'm afraid some of us envy him just a little bit.

One swallow may not make a summer but one successful picture means a flock of them—if you know what I mean. Foreign Legion pictures are going to be with us in every conceivable shape and form. "Algeria," one of Victor Herbert's musicals, will be produced by MGM with Allan Jones in the lead. Then, of course, there's "Beau Geste" already set for production, etc., etc., etc.!

The plan to film a story called "Hollywood Boulevard" not only means bringing back the old street as it was 10 years ago, but it also means signing many of the favorites of that time for important roles in this film which Paramount purposes producing. Negotiations have already been started with Francis X. Bushman, Clara Kimball Young, Betty Compson and Charles Ray, while John Halliday plays the principal role of an old time actor.

• • •

"The Whispering Window" by Courtland Fitzsimmons, a murder mystery with a different twist, has finally been selected by Sam Marx for his first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. Sam, who stepped out of the scenario department to become a producer, will have the advice and counsel of Lucien Hubbard as co-producer of this thriller. Ted Healy will play an important role and Edna May Oliver will have the feminine lead if she returns from Europe in time.

Snapshots of Hollywood:

One of the tragedies of the C. GARDNER SULLIVAN Separation is the expected arrival of the stork in the fall; the SULLIVANS already have three little children; MRS. RICHARD BARTHELMESS back in Hollywood, the house guest of the DONALD OGDEN STEWARTS; she may join DICK in London later, depending on whether he makes a picture or returns to Hollywood; CONSTANCE TALMADGE NETCHER and her sister, NATALIE KEATON, traveling east for a few weeks in Chicago and New York; EDNA MAY OLIVER looking forward to a holiday abroad, the first she has had in several years; NORMA SHEARER, MARION DAVIES, the FRED ASTAIRES, ELEANOR BOARDMAN and scores of other stars dropping in at the DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS Santa Monica home Sunday to meet the bride; MERLE OBERON planning a party in their honor; ISABEL JEWELL moving into HEDDA HOPPER'S house, having rented it while HEDDA is picture-making in Europe; BARBARA BEBE LYON with her father and mother, BEBE DANIELS and BEN LYON, on the BEN BERNIE program; SALLY EILERS and HARRY JOE BROWN, full of health, home after a grand trip to New York, Canada, etc. HARRY JOE denying that he is leaving Warner's any that he has a year's contract; MAY ROBSON dining with her grandson and great granddaughter—a real family party. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Larry Funk At Grove

Succeeding the popular Ranny Weeks, who has completed a ten-month engagement at the Cocoanut Grove, Larry Funk and his "Band of a Thousand Melodies" will begin a summer run tomorrow at the famous downtown night club.

Vaughn Munroe and Muriel Sherman are the featured vocalists with the Funk orchestra. The widely-known orchestra has been booked in the mid-west since its last Boston appearance two years ago.

"Show Boat" Heads New Films

Ziegfeld's famous musical "Show Boat" will have a preview opening tomorrow night on the screen of Keith's Memorial Theater. Several of the actors who played in the original stage production, including Helen Morgan and Charles Winninger, are in this new Universal film.

Irene Dunne heads the cast. The famous star of "Cimarron" will be seen as Magnolia. Allan Jones plays the role of the hero, and Helen Wesley and Paul Robeson are cast in other prominent parts.

Much of Jerome Kern's original score has been retained in this newest version of the Ziegfeld hit. Other numbers have been written by Miss Dunne and Mr. Jones.

• • •

Two new feature pictures open at the Keith-Boston tomorrow, and the Paramount-Fenway screens will reflect one new picture, "Forgotten Faces," and the favorite "Till We Meet Again," which had a first-run showing recently at the Metropolitan. "Bridge of Sighs," featuring Onslow Stevens, Dorothy Tree and Jack LaRue, and "Fang and Claws," the new Frank Buck picture, are the Keith-Boston attractions.

Joe E. Brown Film Coming To Met

"Sons O' Guns," Warner Brothers' latest comedy film co-starring Joe E. Brown and Joan Blondell, headlines a triple-feature program scheduled for an eight-days' engagement at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow.

Joe E. Brown

The new Brown-Blondell picture is based on the Broadway musical success featured the late Jack Donahue.

"Sons O' Guns" is combined with the personal appearance of Tito Guizar, radio singing star, and "Manhattan Madness," a musical revue featuring Johnny Burke.

Besides the stars, "Sons O' Guns" enlists the services of Whit Shaw and the famous Chambers Male Chorus. Bobby Connolly, who produced and staged the original play has contributed several spectacular specialty numbers.

Hunter

Frank Buck's latest film, "Fang and Claw," comes to the RKO Boston screen on Friday.

LUXURY MODEL

By May Christie

Chou-Chou twittered excitedly, making a cheeping like a bird. His brown eyes twinkled at her, as though he knew a thing or two, and wished to say to her: "You're a grand person! You're the goods! I'm sitting pretty, I am!"

Luana got a room in her old hotel over on the West side, for until the business was on a paying footing, she must economize.

At three-thirty, promptly she presented herself in the Vandaveer suite of offices on Wall Street and shortly thereafter the contract was drawn up, signed and sealed.

Luana was to have a drawing account against profits, of one hundreds dollars a week. The clause set forth that the account was to start from the date of signing. She walked out into the bright sunshine, feeling as though she owned the earth.

Followed days and weeks that were amazingly busy, but she loved every moment of them, even if often she was dog tired.

To have one's own business was a vastly different matter from working for an employer!

A temporary workroom had been rented over near the East River and a competent staff had been hired.

Her Only Worry

The only fly in the ointment was that, under the terms of the contract, not even Jimmy must know of her arrangement with Mr. Vandaveer.

She had written Jimmy that she had a new and promising job.

But the contract was to remain a profound secret.

The days of summer that were cramming with exciting world happenings went by.

The big water front strike was on in San Francisco. Luana had a letter from her stepfather, telling her that the National Guard had been summoned from Los Angeles, and that he had gone with them to patrol the strike area.

"He'll love it. He's a born fighter," Luana felt a wave of pride in the pluck of the old Colonel.

Later, her pride was to turn to keen anxiety . . .

A telegram from the Colonel's lawyer in San Francisco informed her that he was lying unconscious in the Military Hospital there. He had sustained a head injury from a rock hurled by one of the strikers. There was some fear of a skull fracture.

Luana arrived in America's coolest summer city on a golden morning. She drove straight to the Presidio.

Followed two days of suspense.

The third morning he rallied. He opened his eyes to find her at the bedside.

The X-ray examination proved to be more favorable than hope was anticipated. Still not out of danger, there was hope of his recovery.

Colonel McCarthy had an excellent constitution. Progress was good.

"You really must go out and get some fresh air, my child," the kindly head nurse told Luana, "or we shall be having you on our hands as the next patient."

Luana had friends in the many-hilled city, notably Nancy and Jasper Payne. This was the young couple who had eloped to Yuma, Arizona, and who, in a double ceremony that included Luana (under her real name of Elizabeth Harmon) and Gerald Bruton, had been united in wedlock by the "marrying judge of Yuma."

Each day, Nancy had come to the hospital, and was continually on the telephone with Luana.

A new, greatly improved Nancy, entirely happy in her shiny little flat that commanded a wonderful view of the bay. As a bride, Nancy had entirely succumbed to the spell of her Jasper—the same Jasper she had laughed at, and snubbed, and jollied along as a suitor!

"Flirts make the best wives," Jasper had assured Luana, with a twinkle.

"Darling, my flirting days are done," smiled Nancy.

The erstwhile butterfly had turned into a model housekeeper, whose world circled round Jasper within the four walls of her modest little home that was as neat as a new pin.

Printed Linen Beach Costume Wins Congress Award

SEE THE SEA—and be seen—in print linen! Here is an important new beach costume of blocked linen in wine and blue on white . . . its matching coat lined with terry cloth from stem to stern. White sail-cloth espadrilles are rope-soled. A Fashion Congress winner, it is modeled by Miss Virginia Richmond, Brookline debutante.

The play-suit bathing suit, with its flattering bodice and skirt, is the kind seen on smart girls at beach clubs . . . its prototype gets into the rotogravure on young things sunning themselves anywhere from Bermuda to Waikiki. And it is gracefully worn by the older woman as well. Capes and swagger jackets are short and snappy this season. Only the dramatic fitted beach coats go in for any great length.

For shopping information on this beach costume, which is moderately priced, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Copyright, 1936, King Features Synd., Inc.

"IS FIFTY too late to get slim?" The question of age comes up rather frequently in reducing. There is really no age limit in reducing, for physical condition is the chief consideration.

At any age, excessive overweight taxes the health and, in most cases, the individual is healthier for removing at least a portion of the excess.

Before attempting to reduce it is always wise to consult your doctor, and after one has passed the half century mark it is even more important to know the body's deficiencies and limitations. If your doctor agrees that less weight would improve your health and increase your chances for a hale old age, then start right in counting and subtracting calories.

BALANCED REDUCING MENU

BREAKFAST — CALORIES

Pineapple juice, ¾ glass	100
Whole wheat toast (2 thin slices)	160
Butter, ½ pat	50
Coffee, 1 tsp. cream, 1 rounded tsp. sugar	50

LUNCHEON

Tomato and bacon sandwich (reducer's dressing)	250
Lettuce and hard cooked egg salad (boiled dressing)	85
Tea, 1 lump sugar	25

DINNER

Pot roast of beef (liberal serving)	165
Mashed potato	100
Gravy, 2 tbsp.	40
Grapefruit salad (fruit dressing)	50
	355

TOTAL CALORIES FOR DAY 1015

NO AGE LIMIT FOR REDUCING

Be content to take off the weight very gradually. If you have been carrying this burden of weight for a period of years you cannot expect to lose it abruptly. At this age the skin has lost a part of its elasticity, which makes it necessary to lose the fat very slowly if you are to protect your appearance. One half pound per week is a safe losing rate.

The question of exercise must also be submitted to your doctor. With a heart condition, excessively high blood pressure, and other conditions such as fatty degeneration, strenuous exercise is not possible. However, even in such cases, you should by all means cut your food intake to stop storing additional fat. For those who can exercise, the "General Exercises—To Keep You Trim and Fit as a Fiddle"—are effective and not strenuous.

There is a distinct tendency toward increased weight after 40, but the fact that individuals without this surplus fat live longer is proof enough that it is not natural. Those who keep supple with daily exercise, and who keep their weight normal, retain youthful lines and a greater amount of vigor to the end of the journey. Don't settle down just because you have come into middle age. Keep up your daily walk, have your calorie intake comparable to your activity and you can take your time growing old.

This does not mean that, after one has reached the two score and ten mark, it is always best to aim at normal weight. In some instances such a reduction would bring about too drastic a change. Let your doctor tell you how many pounds you may lose to the advantage of your health. Be content to remove the uncomfortable, flabby fat that is the greatest burden, but do not under any consideration try to recapture your once slim silhouette.

Reducing is not always advisable, but one thing is certain: With excessive overweight there should be a restriction on food intake to prevent storage of more fat. Obesity effects deteriorating changes of the heart and blood vessels, and a safe reduction in weight would not only make you more comfortable, but would, according to statistics, extend your life line.

Send a stamped addressed envelope for the leaflet, "General Exercises—To Keep You Trim and Fit as a Fiddle," unless you already have it.

Improve Every-Day Speech

A ROMANCE wrecked by poor pronunciation! Nonsense, you think? Not a bit of it.

For a week Dan had noticed a charming, delightfully pretty girl who rode down town each morning on the same street car with him.

He'd laid a good plot to get an introduction. Then, this morning, he sat behind pretty Marian as she chatted with her chum, Irene.

"Well, I'm from MizZOORa about his deFISsit being accidental," drawled Marian in a harsh, nasal voice. "We all may AIR (err, she meant) but this is just a PREEtense. He's been going with a fast CLICK and you can't do that free GRATus for nuthin'!"

So bang went the prospective romance! And you can't blame Dan. Marian will lose out all her life if she does not learn to speak with decent correctness in her mother tongue. MisSOORraa (Missouri), DEFicit, err pronounced URR, clique pronounced CLEEK, and gratis as GRATIS—these are not mysteries too deep for all of us to master.

Practice does it and observation of careful speakers. Many people genuinely self-educated are familiar with words in print, but not in speech. Too bad to let pronunciation blunders give you away.

Our 40-page booklet, WORDS MOST OFTEN MISPRONOUNCED, will warn you of word-traps, show you clearly the right way to say these "catchers." Don't be misjudged for speech blunders. Check up, and speak well.

Weekly Marketing Talk

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

IF ENTERTAINING presents any problems to you, attend the classes being planned for the Spring Term of the Martha Lee Homemakers School. The series of five classes is to be held on Tuesday Evenings at 6:30 and Wednesday Afternoon at 2:00, beginning May 26 and 27.

They will include the etiquette of all parties which involve the serving of food. The classes are absolutely free—just obtain a ticket by writing or calling Martha Lee, 3 Winthrop square, designating the time you wish to attend.

THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NO NEED for any home to be without a complete supply of refreshing beverages for dropper-inners these days. A large, full quart, 32-ounce bottle of ginger ale, the sure thirst quencher can be had for 10 cents. Also in the same size, at the same price, that is one popular lime rickey, lime and lithia, and club soda. These also come in a smaller size, a 12-ounce bottle, which may be more practical for the smaller family or individual service. These 12-ounce bottles sell for 5 cents.

25 CENTS WILL BUY YOU MANY FOODS at a great saving in the sale this week at A & P stores. Many hot weather foods are included in the unusual values. Large No. 2 cans of pears, which make an ideal dessert for spring meals, sell 2 for 25 cents. 20 tea bags for 25 cents, usually 29 cents and a Walnut Cake—a rich butter cake, full of nuts with a creamy white frosting—2 for 25 cents.

IN THE AVERAGE HOME salt has hundreds of uses other than its very important one of seasoning of food. Here is a new way of using a package of nationally known salt. Send the spout with 10c to cover postage and you will receive a set of salt and pepper shakers, which are silver plated and shaped like a cocktail shaker.

SEEING IS BELIEVEING, and you will not only believe, but you will see if you use this glass frying pan that follows on the heels of the glass saucepan of a famous make that appeared recently. This skillet sells for 75c and a cover goes with it for an additional 35c.

WITH THE SUMMER SEASON approaching, people are moving about and planning all sorts of activities, and a portable radio would be a grand suggestion for a graduation gift for the young folks. It will play anywhere; has a washable airplane linen cover; it looks like a small suitcase; will work on AC or DC current; has a built-in antenna, and is made by a well-known firm. Sells for $9.85.

GARDENING IS THE topic of many conversations these days and all kinds of gardens are being planned at the moment—flower, vegetable and herb. To keep things well straightened out, little plant markers that are water-proof, durable, legible and renewable, sell for 95c a dozen. They have a space in which the variety, color and date can be written for the records.

A BIRD BATH adds a note of interest to small gardens, and these are selling at a special price this week at one of the department stores. Usually $3.95, they are now $2.95. The regulation size and shape.

LITTLE PICKET FENCES have gone the way of so many things these days, and can now be purchased by the foot, which, of course, is a great convenience. The fence is one foot tall, and every few feet has a long peg which is hammered into the ground to secure it in place. Six feet of fence sells for $1.00.

FOR INFORMATION on any of the above items, write to Martha Lee, 3 Winthrop square, or call LIBerty 4000.

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 14

THERE WERE two distinct purposes behind the question I had put to Philip Veritzen in answer to his request that we keep Mary with us at the farm "indefinitely."

"And why must Mary necessarily be alone in a city apartment?" I had asked, and an instant later I had added, "especially when she is ill?"

I wanted to strengthen the impression I had given him that Noel had told us nothing of his bizarre task of staying in a luxuriously furnished but unoccupied apartment 12 hours out of the 24. I also wished to spar for time, to see if he would say anything that might give some clue, however faint, to the mystery of his actions.

But I might have known that Philip Veritzen, past master of diplomacy and intrigue, would say nothing he had not carefully weighed. His answer, though prompt, told me nothing I had not known, nothing that he was unwilling for me to know.

SPECIALIZED WORK

"Because," he said speaking slowly, as if he were explaining matters to a child, "the work which Noel is doing for me is highly specialized and takes a great deal of time. Mary necessarily will be left alone for periods of many hours every day—and some nights."

An almost irresistible impulse to laugh jeeringly came over me, but I succeeded in repressing even an amused breath. Instead, I spoke slowly, giving myself time to think.

"How long will this work of Noel's last?"

He waited for almost a second before replying.

"That I cannot tell. It does not depend altogether on me."

I was glad that he could not see the start I gave, and hoped that my breathing had not changed its tempo in the sudden thought which had come to me.

Had his training slipped for once? Had he dropped an "essential clue" despite his caution?

I hurried to answer him, lest he think I was pondering his reply, and trying to gain some information from it.

"Then by 'indefinite, you meant 'indefinite,'" I said lightly and with deliberate banality.

"Is it your experience of me that I do not mean what I say?" he asked a bit frigidly.

MARY'S SUSPICIONS

"Oh! no!" I answered quickly as if confused. "On the contrary, I always have found that you mean exactly what you say. But this is all beside the point. I am not the person who should be talking this over with you. All I can tell you is that both Dickey and I are always glad to have Mary and Noel with us. But we cannot presume to make any plans for them. Neither of them has given any indication of how long Mary wishes to stay. You, of course, will wish to talk with one or both of them. Which shall I call first?"

"Neither! Wait!" he shot back quickly, and if any other person than Philip Veritzen had been speaking, I would have said there was something very like panic in his voice. "I did not call up to talk to either of them. I simply wished to know if they were there. Noel said he would be back in the morning and I am reasonably sure he will keep his word."

"You may be absolutely sure," I said indignantly, regardless of tautology.

"Put it that way, if you like," he replied indifferently. "It really does not matter. But Mary's reaction to this work of Noel's does not matter. I do not care to have her speculations—or suspicions—aroused. Tell me! Is this illness of hers physical or is it caused by worry over the long hours Noel is compelled to work?"

PROOF OF A PLOT?

My pulses bounded as I mentally repeated the words: "I do not care to have her speculations—or suspicions—aroused." Without his realizing it, he was filling in the pattern of the shadowy outline which already had been drawn in my mind.

I did not care to waste any time in conjecture, however. Under no circumstances must I let Philip Veritzen suspect that I was reading anything unusual into his words. And again I exemplified in my answer the advantage of "lying a little" that our young "newly-weds" might not "suffer much."

"I am sure it is a physical illness," I said. "There seems no indication of any mental strain. But she looks as if she were over-fatigued."

MARY'S CAREER!

"That is entirely probable," he said with a sudden chill in his voice, and I knew that I had committed less majesty by intimating even so vaguely that he was overworking his protege. "I have been wondering lately whether Mary has sufficient physical stamina to endure the strenuous course of training which I am compelled to give her."

Ice water trickling down my spine was the only simile I could employ for the sensation his words gave me. Was he simply taking a petty revenge for the criticism—as he evidently considered it—I had given him, and trying to frighten me about Mary's future, or did there lie in his words something really menacing to the brilliant career as a Veritzen star to which Mary confidently looked forward and which he had promised to give her?

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Persons Who Look Ahead Find Happiness and Contentment

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

There's another day coming. Be ready for it. Easier said than done, you'll say. And I'll agree, for all of us live for the day that is, cry over the day that was, never give a thought to the day that is to be.

Young or old, rich or poor, man or woman—the average individual dwells wholly in the present, save for the moments he takes off to be sorry for the misfortunes of yesterday.

Today is but a brief period of 24 hours, eight or more of which we shall spend in sleep. Yesterday has passed beyond recovery, as irretrievably lost as though it never existed. One fleeting, the other fled—neither the past nor the present is happiness material.

Tomorrow should be the BIG day in your life and mine. We should save for it, study for it, arm for it. Then, and only then, can we rise to the challenge of the future—prepared for all the joys it holds, ready to accept the sorrows that must come.

It is well to profit by the lessons of the past. Better, perhaps, to grasp the opportunities of the present. But best of all is to look ahead always, remembering that yesterday is gone, today going and that tomorrow is the only day that really matters.

My five-dollar award today goes to Mrs. R., who wrote this very interesting letter:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have a problem which I would like you to render. I am 26. Five years ago I married a man I loved more than any other person in the world. We were happy for a while. But just a month ago he took all his personal things and moved out, saying he had lost interest in the home.

I can understand a situation of this kind happening to some other persons, but it just doesn't seem possible that I should be the sufferer. How could he be so cruel as to walk out, leaving me and his wife and his little daughter?

And the worst thing of all is that I still love him and would give my life for him. From the day of our marriage I tried to prove this, and I am not boasting when I say a more anxious-to-please wife than I never existed anywhere.

Miss Fairfax, do you think he will ever return to me?

MRS. R.

MY DEAR FRIEND,

It may be your husband will be back within a month, possibly sooner. It won't take him long to tire of the freedom he mistakes so attractive.

Many men, especially those in their thirties and early forties, get to brooding over the good times they think they've had. The past—beyond the hope, parties, freedom to go about as one pleases—looks strangely wonderful now and then.

Occasionally, like your husband, they yield to the temptation to drop all responsibilities and figuratively retrace their steps. They try to be boys and young men again. They make a desperate attempt. But success they never can. No one has ever brought back the past, and they are no exception.

Soon the comforts of home, the picture of a loving wife, the memory of the little, abandoned baby rise before them. And, compared to that vision, the widest, freest party on earth becomes a cold, drab affair—lifeless, thrilless, a mockery of the happiness they didn't appreciate.

Your husband cannot escape this fate. He must share it as either you have. And when he does, he will return.

You can use your own judgment about telling him both.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I shall be graduated from high school next month and I have a temporary job for the summer. In the fall I hope to continue my education. What I shall study is a problem. I sing well. My friends tell me I have a brilliant future on the stage or in radio.

But my family urges me to train as a nurse and to fit myself for a career less uncertain than the theater.

What would you do?

HOPEFUL

DEAR YOUNG WOMAN:

Do not rely too much on what your friends tell you. If you do, you'll find yourself in hot water most of the time.

If I were you, I'd go to my music instructor in school and seek his opinion. I'd be guided largely by what he said.

However, remember that there is abundant competition in both radio and theater. You will succeed if you are exceptional. If you're not, there's little use trying.

Nursing, on the other hand, is a down-to-the-earth, common sense profession, demanding much of the girl who chooses it, offering small financial remuneration. Yet, the knowledge that one is serving humanity makes nursing one of the most satisfying of all careers.

In choosing a vocation be guided by the advice of those who are competent to judge and by the amount of work you are willing to do to achieve success.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 17 and much in love with a boy my age. We've been friends for more than five years and from the first planned to be married.

Though our parents approve, marriage is out of the question at present because my fiance has been unable to find employment. But my friends do not seem to understand, and the questions they ask are so embarrassing that we are forced to keep off the main streets.

Why should anyone care why a young man can't find work? Or why should anyone question my wisdom in delaying marriage until we have a little money ahead? MISS L. L.

MY DEAR GIRL,

Your's too sensitive. You're making mountains out of molehills. Nobody really cares whether your friend gets a job tomorrow or whether he will have to wait a year. Nobody but you, he and your families.

My advice to you is stop inventing calamities. They will come of their own accord.

At 17 you do not have to be hasty about marriage. It would be wiser to go to school and fit yourself for some occupation. Then, a few years hence, when both of you have jobs and money, you will be ready for matrimony.

Don't complain about how hard the world is on you when you are making no effort to improve yourself.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Bridge

Meeting An Over-Ruff

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

When the defeat of a contract depends on one of the defenders over-ruffing the declarer, the best technique demands that the high-card defensive tricks be cashed at an early stage.

Wily declarers do not risk being over-ruffed if they can avoid it through the simple stratagem of discarding a losing card instead of ruffing. Today's hand is an illustration.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
East-West 30 part-score.

	♠ A 10 7 3 ♡ 9 8 ♢ A K 2 9 ♣ 10 6 5
♠ 7 5 6 4 3 ♡ 8 ♢ 9 7 6 4 ♣ A 9 7	North West East South	♠ K ♡ A K Q 10 6 3 2 ♢ 8 5 3 ♣ K 4
	♠ Q 9 5 ♡ 7 5 4 ♢ 10 7 ♣ Q 7 3 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♢	3 ♡	Pass	Pass

South opened the ten of diamonds, dummy played low, and the diamond suit was continued with the deuce. North won the tack and followed with the Ace and King.

If the declarer had made the error of ruffing either with a high or a low card, South's Jack of trumps would have been promoted to a full trick, either by an over-ruff of a low card or by establishment if East had ruffed with a high honor.

The declarer, however, was too experienced to be caught in such a web.

He simply discarded his losing King of spades. Now there was no defense. North led the Ace of spades, East ruffed and ran off his nine tricks without difficulty.

Good defense would have made the contract impossible of fulfilment. North could tell from his partner's second lead of the deuce that the declarer started with three diamonds. He could therefore have cashed in safety the three diamond tricks, but before leading the fourth round in the hope that South could over-ruff the declarer, he should have taken the precaution of leaving down the spade Queen.

Under no circumstances could this play have cost a trick and on the particular lay of the cards that existed, it would have had a splendid result. Declarer could not thereafter discard a losing card and would be forced to ruff.

Whether he chose to ruff high or low, South's Jack would have been promoted to winning value.

Bridge Ceremony

Without ceremony—as far as could be ascertained today—the new $2,225,000 Fore River bridge linking Weymouth and Quincy will be officially opened at 2 p. m. Saturday.

Glamour of the Orient in Beauty Recipe

POSED BY TERRY WALKER.

New Make-Up for the Eyes Based on Formula Used By Egyptian Women

By ARLINE GOULD

LOVELY EYES and desert skies have long been associated with the exotic mystery of the East.

And now, thanks to an Oriental formula used by Egyptian women to enhance the dusky splendor of their eyes, a new eye cosmetique reaches our shores. It's not only glamorous but highly practical, being waterproof and all that an eye cosmetic should be.

We're terribly excited about it. Made originally in Cairo, entirely by hand, this new mascara is now being made on the outskirts of France. No hand or foot press is used and every detail of the process is done with delicate skill.

Finest Oriental Kohl is the basis of the mascara. Kohl, your dictionary will tell you, has been used by Egyptian women since ancient times to darken their lashes and lids. Perhaps it was used by Queen Cleopatra herself!

Ingredients of the modern product are of such a nature that there is no tendency to sting, irritate or smart the eye. The mascara will neither run nor smudge. Allowed to dry under a shower five minutes later, no smudge is noticed! Neither tears nor perspiration will react unfavorably.

There are 15 gorgeous colors—even unto silver and gold—the others being black, blue, blue-black, green-black, purple, brown, green and auburn.

To make application easier, there is a double row of bristle in the brush, rather than the usual single row.

Tests have shown that this "mascara will last for as long as two or three days without retouching. For daytime wear, one coat is all that is necessary; evening, for added lustre, two coats are preferable.

Then there's the Egyptian formula eyeshadow which also is being made by skilled workmen in France. It is available in blue, silver-gray, green, brown and purple. It is of a tender consistency which spreads easily and has a soft, irridescent look so flattering to the eyes.

But the story isn't told yet. Along with these preparations comes a cosmetique remover and root strengthener which is the best medium for removing mascara and eye shadow. Spread a little on a piece of cotton or absorbent tissue with soft, easy strokes and all make-up is removed.

Leave some of this bland cream on clean lashes overnight to strengthen the roots and encourage long and luxuriant lashes. An eyelash has a short life span, you know, and new lashes are continually replacing the old. Which makes it easy to train the new lashes into strength.

If you wish to know the name of this new eye cosmetique family which, by the way, has been given the Egyptian word for "love," telephone Liberty 4000 or write Arline Gould, Boston Evening American, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Head G-Man To Address U.S. Boys On Air

By N. F. T.

He-man boys and boyish he-men should certainly relish a radio treat due on the dials (WBZ) tonight between 9:15 and 10 p. m.

It affords all-America an informal talk by J. Edgar Hoover, the U. S. G-man chief and the real bad man that most law-breaking bad men think they are.

Although a quiet, mild mannered fellow, the Department of Justice boss, faces a finish fight with hoodlums on a minute's notice. As a result of his fearlessness, Public Enemies, as the Dillingers, Floyds and Nelsons came to be known, are becoming scarcer than rodents in a rat-trap factory. He is to address the anniversary dinner of the Boys' Club of America, being held in Philadelphia, by means of a special landline connected to carry the festivities from coast to coast.

"N. F. T."

Walt Whitman, whose fame as a poet rather obscured his distinguished Civil War service in uniform, will be sketched by Guy Richardson, during the program of the Mass. Sons of Union Veterans, as arranged for tonight at 7:30 p. m. and originating in WMEX studios.

Inspired by Fred Allen's recent "upside-down harmonicist," Charley V. Whitney, self-tyled "eccentric pianist," will perform the twin feats of pounding the keys while standing on his head and also while lying under the piano. He has a place in the Town Hall Tonight amateur parade (WEEI) with Fred Allen this evening at 8.

Whitney, whose occupation for the past ten years has been piloting a school bus at Middleton, Mass., claims he learned his unusual tricks as a youngster because he was always bored practicing.

Lafayette Day

"Lafayette Day" will be observed in schools throughout Massachusetts today, following a proclamation issued by Governor Curley.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

THE 121ST PSALM

"I WILL LIFT UP MINE EYES UNTO THE HILLS FROM WHENCE COMETH MY HELP."

(Shadows surround me—fear and confusion fill me. I have come to the lowlands of life—to the bad lands where doubt and perplexity stretch out and out like a parched desert and there is no food for my soul, no shelter for my troubled spirit. I have come to the bad lands, and fear and confusion have conquered me.

But I will lift up mine eyes! For beyond the desert of this day's disorder there rise, tall and shining the records of better days . . . great human records of courage and self-sacrifice, wisdom and endurance, tall as the everlasting hills . . . shining as the gates of Paradise!

I have come to the lowlands of our human bewilderment and my heart is bowed with doubt and fear. But I will lift up my eyes to the memory of better days, of braver men. I will lift up my eyes and take heart. For the blood of those men is in my veins . . . and their courage burns in my spirit . . . and from their peaks of achievement cometh my help.

"MY HELP COMETH FROM THE LORD WHICH MADE HEAVEN AND EARTH."

They did not make their own courage, those men. They did not, unaided, achieve those peaks. Their bodies were as weak as mine—their spirits as cowardly. But something burned within their mortal flesh which lifted them above their weakness. God burned in those men! And God burns in me! I will lift up my eyes to God, who set the hills above the desert . . . and courage above fear . . . and Who made me as He made those who have gone before me.

"HE WILL NOT SUFFER THY FOOT TO BE MOVED: HE THAT KEEPETH THEE WILL NOT SLUMBER.

"BEHOLD HE THAT KEEPETH ISRAEL SHALL NEITHER SLUMBER NOR SLEEP.

"THE LORD IS THY KEEPER: THE LORD IS THY SHADE UPON THY RIGHT HAND.

"THE SUN SHALL NOT SMITE THEE BY DAY NOR THE MOON BY NIGHT.

"THE LORD SHALL PRESERVE THEE FROM ALL EVIL: HE SHALL PRESERVE THY SOUL.

"THE LORD SHALL PRESERVE THY GOING OUT AND THY COMING IN FROM THIS TIME FORTH, AND EVEN FOREVER MORE."

Men may desert and betray me. I may desert and betray myself. Violence may beset me.

Deep within me there is God, because God, at my making, breathed His spark into me. I may be—and am—as weak and stupid as the mud from which my flesh was made.

I have come to the lowlands of life and my weak body is lost in a desert of discouragement. But clear and tall above me rise the shining hills . . . and deep within me burns the God who made it possible for men to build those hills.

800 VOLUNTEERS

More than 800 volunteer adult workers have been busy for many weeks preparing every detail of the performance.

The boys themselves have entered enthusiastically into the event and have been rehearsing their parts constantly.

Preliminary work has included preparing costumes for some of the events and building sections of bridges, towers and cabins and transporting these properties to the Garden.

TUB SLAYING CASE OUTLINED

New York, May 20 (INS)—John Fiorenza, dapper 24-year-old upholsterer's helper and paroled convict, was portrayed as the premeditated slayer of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton, young fiction writer, by District Attorney William C. Dodge, in his opening address to the jury today.

Dodge described in short, graphic phrases how, he said, Fiorenza invaded the Titterton apartment, attacked and strangled the woman and then fossed her body into the bathtub. The prosecutor concluded by saying to the jurors:

"I am going to ask you to render a verdict of murder in the first degree."

Conviction on such a charge would mean death for Fiorenza in Sing Sing's electric chair.

Dill Loses Motion To Quash Love Suit

Mt. Vernon, O., May 20 (AP)—Judge Philip L. Wilkins today overruled a motion to dismiss a $25,000 alienation of affections suit against former U. S. Senator Clarence C. Dill.

Judge Wilkins ordered, however, that virtually all the testimony intended to link Dill with arranging an illegal operation, as charged by his niece by marriage, Mrs. Margie Heaton Dill, be stricken from the record.

Dill was charged jointly with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Grace Dill of Fredericktown, O., with alienating the affections of Mrs. Margie Dill's husband, Wendell Dill, son of Mrs. Grace Dill.

CITY ENGINEERS BARE HEATLESS COAL TROUBLES

Testimony that city engineers refused to start fires in certain public buildings because they could get no heat from so-called "fireproof" coal was given before the Boston Finance Commission today.

The commission resumed its public hearing at City Hall into the city's 1935 contract with the Standard Coal Company of Mattapan for 12,000 tons of coal at $9.45.

City Councillor Henry Selvitella, of East Boston, the day's first witness, testified to receiving protests from a group of men who complained there was no hot water for shower baths in the East Boston gymnasium.

GAVE NO HEAT

Selvitella said he investigated and was told by Thomas Quilty, the engineer, that the coal burned all right, but gave no heat and that he had complained about.

Quilty finally refused to build any more fires, because he had to start them daily and they went out without giving any heat, the councillor said. "Fairly satisfactory" coal was finally supplied.

George H. Mackin, engineer at the branch library in West Roxbury, testified he burned between 50 and 60 tons of the coal by building a fire daily, and that he found huge masses of slate, clinkers and tar in it.

GOT GOOD COAL

He said after 10 weeks of complaining about it, he received six tons of coal that would burn. He has had 16 years of experience as an engineer.

Retained by the commission after the City Council had begun its investigation of distribution of "fireproof" coal to welfare recipients, Perry Barker, a fuel expert of 32 years' experience, testified to tests showing the coal not up to specifications of the contract. He said it contained huge clinkers and 16 per cent foreign matter.

The contract provided that 20 per cent of the semi-bituminous coal should pass athrough a one-inch round-mesh screen, he said, and in one test only 1¼ per cent would go through.

NEW BRIDGE READY

Fore River Span Opens Saturday

Eleven million pounds of structural steel and 2,000,000 pounds of reinforcing steel are among the chief articles used in construction of the new $2,000,000 Fore River bridge, Quincy and Weymouth, which will be opened to traffic next Saturday afternoon.

Quincy officials are making plans for a celebration in connection with the opening of the bridge.

Among the other articles used in building the bridge were 900,000 tons of concrete, 740 tons of surfacing, 60,000 cubic yards of filling, 8000 feet of pine for drainage and water service, 385,000 board feet of lumber, 200,000 linear feet of piles, 36,000 square feet of sawed facs granite and 1000 cubic yards of quarry faced stone.

The new bridge is 2116 feet long and has one 89-foot span, five 90-foot spans, two 212-foot spans and a draw span of 219 feet.

The roadway of the bridge is 60 feet wide and has two eight-foot sidewalks.

A garage is located under the towers for housing trucks for use in sanding South Shore highways during the winter.

Pillsbury is survived by a son, John D. Pillsbury, Jr., living in Andover.

SAYRE CITES TRADE GAINS

Kansas City, Mo., May 20 (AP)—Francis B. Sayre, assistant secretary of state, said today there has been a "gratifying increase in trade with countries with which the United States has negotiated reciprocal commercial agreements.

The state department's trade authority, addressing the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, cited gains he said had been made in American exports to Cuba, Belgium, Sweden and Canada since pacts with those nations went into effect.

"The trade agreements are already bearing fruit, not merely in a few detached instances but along a widespread front," he said.

His address was devoted chiefly to an analysis of benefits he said were to be derived by agricultural regions through an expansion of foreign markets for exportable surpluses. This, he asserted, was one of the principle objectives of Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade program.

RESERVE BOARD LOSES TEXAN

Washington, May 20 (US)—Ralph W. Morrison, prominent Texas banker and rancher, has resigned as a member of the federal reserve board because of disagreement with policies instituted by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles and backed by the Roosevelt administration, it was learned today.

Morrison was the largest single contributor to President Roosevelt's 1932 campaign, having donated $75,000, because of his friendship for Vice-President John N. Garner. He was a member of President Roosevelt's delegation to the economic conference at London in 1933.

Chairman Eccles and Morrison tangled on the board's policies shortly after the Texan had been appointed for a two-year term by President Roosevelt, to the new board set up on February 1 under the 1935 banking act.

TRIPLE HANGING SET ON CODAST

Sacramento, Cal., May 20 (US)—California's first triple hanging in several years is scheduled for Friday, with two men due to walk to San Quentin and one to Folsom prison gallows.

Alexander Mackay, British subject, who was reprieved from hanging twice by Governor Merriam at the request of English and federal authorities will be allowed to go to the gallows with his comrade in crime, Joe Kristy, administration sources disclosed today.

Opposition to further reprieve or commutation of sentences for the pair has been voiced by business and civic leaders throughout the state, it was disclosed. The two were convicted under the kidnaping law for participation in the San Quentin prison break a year ago.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

It was apparently a big night out in Attica, Kansas, on Monday evening last. For once the little town of 756 inhabitants was in the national limelight, not to say also on the national hook-up. Governor Landon of Kansas was speaking to a high school graduating class of 29 of his own people.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

How he came to do so is not particularly important. The facts seem to be that an old friend and contemporary of the Governor's old friends, one Pat Crowell, a mighty man at football in his youth, told the Governor that he had a son graduating this year from the Attica high school, who showed signs of being a worthy successor to his sire on the gridiron, and would the Governor please make the commencement address for his class.

And apparently very much alive to the chances of securing another football player for Kansas University as good as his father had been, the Governor allowed as how he would be glad to oblige. He also made it plain that he didn't want it to be considered a political occasion. It wasn't.

Twang Like Coolidge's But It's Kansas Brand

As a matter of fact, it was such a graduating address as might have been given before any small town high school by any local pastor or lawyer or judge who had been asked to speak because his people honored him and respected him. The Governor spoke less than 20 minutes in a manner which forcibly reminded at least one auditor of Calvin Coolidge. The twang was different. It didn't sound like Vermont. I suppose it sounded like Kansas.

Occasionally there was a brief turn of phrase which reminded one fleetingly of Will Rogers - a Will Rogers without a trace of humor, without satire, but with something of the same slant at things.

Few graduating exercises in a town that size can draw an audience of over 5000 in a football stadium, unless the speaker is a well-advertised orator. Governor Landon is not that. Although he was speaking in Attica, the Attic bees had never touched his lips to eloquence, as the old Greek fable has it. He spoke very plainly, simply, and briefly. One or two phrases had a faint suggestion of a political reference, but only a faint suggestion. Even over the radio one sensed that he was talking to his folks as one of them.

Draws Illustration From Bible Story

He was talking to a crowd that knew its Bible. In developing his theme, "Courage," he drew his chief illustration from the Old Testament story of the spies whom Moses sent out into the Promised Land and who returned to point out enthusiastically that it was a land overflowing with milk and honey and that they should fight their way in at once and take possession.

But because others of the Children of Israel lacked courage they had to wander for 40 years in the wilderness, until at last they got up courage to enter the land, fight the giants (there were giants in those days) and take possession of Canaan. And when the land was allotted Caleb, chief original "booster," asked that his land might be up in the mountains where the giants lived.

There was a homely and traditional touch in this little apologue that carried conviction with it. Courage and good citizenship were his themes. Truisms, in the words of Elihu Root, but truisms which were necessary to the continued progress of the old American ideals. The implication—and it was no more than an implication—was that much of the gospel being preached to youth today was a defeatist gospel in that it saw future progress only in terms of a complete abandonment of old American traditions, the traditions of the pioneers who settled and built up Kansas.

Difficult Times Ahead for Youth

For present-day youth the Governor saw difficult times ahead, problems more difficult than the pioneers had to face, demanding everything that a sober, laborious, sensible youth movement can bring to our political life.

Every word Governor Landon said seemed to imply "I am no orator as Brutus is." One could not help making comparisons. But never once did the speaker step out of his part. He was giving a bunch of high school graduates the best advice he knew, in language most suited to their understanding. And a much larger audience, I suspect, received it respectfully and sympathetically for what it was.

MANNEQUINS AND JUDGES HELP PICK GOWNS

Crisp, Dark Fabrics for Town; Flimsy for Night, Congress Votes

MISS BETTY JACQUES MISS MARIETTA HOWE MISS BLANCHE O'RIORDEN MISS CAROLINE PIERCE

MISS BLANCHE O'RIORDEN MRS. JOHN HARWOOD MRS. MARK HOPKINS

Huge hats, as daffy and exciting as you dare to wear, are an important dash in the recipe for this summer's smartness, the socialite jurors decreed.

The gay background of the Ritz roof garden was the setting for this week's fashion session. The horseshoe-shaped judge table was placed in the center of the brilliantly decorated roof which overlooks the Charles river and Public Garden.

It was an appropriate background for the sophisticated "Summer in Town" clothes modeled and discussed during the luncheon.

Mrs. Whiting Willaurr of Dedham, smartly dressed young society matron, headed the list of jurors.

The others were Mrs. Mark Hopkins, Mrs. William S. Tavior, Mrs. George Day, Mrs. John H. Harwood, Jr., Mrs. Charles W. Birtler, Mrs. W. Knowles Gray, Mrs. Hamilton Heard, Mrs. Edward M. Douglas, Mrs. John Marshall, Mrs. William Faversham and Mrs. A. H. B. Peabody.

Dark for Daytime

The inviolable rule for town wear, the judges agreed, is Wear only dark colors in the daytime. White or light accessories, yes, and lots of them, but keep the main color dark.

One of the judges went so far as to say that she would not wear light clothes in town unless she were in an emergency like having to rush the baby to a doctor!

After dark, clothes are an entirely different matter. When you go dancing in town, wining and dining at a roof garden or sidewalk cafe, wear the lightest, flimsiest frock you can buy.

An evening dress of white embroidered organdie, dainty as a christening robe, sent the judges into raptures of praise. Miss Blanche O'Riorden, tall and graceful debutante, modeled this dress with its yards and yards of skirt stiffened with horse-hair and a tender clump of pink hydranges.

A dreamy printed crepa dress with delicate yellow and brown flowers on a background of white was another roof garden fashion which won approval. Carolyn Pierce, another lovely debutante, modeled this dress and with it a sophisticated box jacket of yellow sharkskin.

Sharkskin Good

The sharskin jacket is one of the new versatile fashions which hangs their degree of formality with the dress worn with it. Perfectly correct, the judges decided with a formal summer daytime dress and even a casual sports frock.

Marietta Howe, one of yesterday's socialite mannequins, showed in what amazingly clever guises cotton is appearing this season. Her dress was a black and white printed pique which had all the worldliness of silk yet was cool and comfortable as a tennis dress.

With it she wore an adorable off-the-face hat edged with white cotton rick-rack. The ensemble proved what a fashion-Cinderella cotton has become!

An amusing and highly practical town-wear dress was modeled by Miss Betsy Jacques, tall and attractive socialite mannequin. Blue polka dot crepe was the fabric. A zipper from neck to hem and a coquettish white pique petticoat were the fashion touches which delighted the jurors.

9 Stores Exhibit

Miss Annice Brink, fashion editor of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, was the commentator.

Stores which exhibited clothes at yesterday's session were Lawson and Hubbard, Theodore, Inc., Jordan Marsh Company, Kennedy's, T. Slattery Company, Jacob Crawford Hollidge, Manahan, and R. H. White Company.

Photographs of summer clothes which were awarded Fashion Congress tags were taken following the session. These will be published daily in the fashion pages of the American and Sunday Advertiser for a week, beginning tomorrow.

Call School Chiefs To Defend Queries On Religion

School superintendents in Groton, Billerica, Burlington and Middleboro will appear in the office of Attorney-General Paul A. Dever, Friday to defend the method of examining prospective school teachers in those towns.

Commissioner of Education James G. Reardon ordered the towns of Billerica and Groton on the list already filed with the attorney-general, charged today, unjustly on the part of school officials was to blame for the situation which, he asserts, is intolerable.

Groton school officials deny flatly that any rank is for teaching or attempting had been questioned about their religion.

Billerica officials admitted that blanks containing questions as to the applicants' religious beliefs are still in use, but asserted that the question had been ordered deleted by a clerk before the applications are filed.

Cycle Jaunt Costs 5 Months, $25 Fine

Nearly three weeks ago, Alex Bevis 22, of Broadway, South Boston, went for a little motorcycle ride and today in Quincy court he found that his jaunt was costly. The price was five months of freedom and $25 cash.

For operating an uninsured motorcycle he was sentenced to one month operating an unregistered motorcycle one month, endangering one month, speeding $25.

Bevis, according to testimony was chased by three motorcycle policemen after Officer William Walsh clocked him on the Wollaston boulevard and through Quincy streets until the motorcycle went out of control and struck a tree.

The driver was declared to have fled, but was arrested two days later near his home. He did not appeal the fine and sentences.

Archbishop Diaz Dies in Mexico City

Mexico City, May 20 (U.S.)—Archbishop Pascual Diaz, titular head of the Catholic Church in Mexico, died at 10:20 o'clock last night (12:20 a.m. E.D.T. Wednesday).

He had been suffering from an intestinal infection for the last three months. The Archbishop rallied about two weeks ago but his condition grew worse today and he sank rapidly.

The prelate would have been 60 years old on June 22.

Dog Slayer Gets Year

Yonkers, N. Y., May 20 (U.S.)—Accused of having thrown a small terrier dog from a fifth-story window window to its death, John Morrison, 27, was committed to Eastview Penitentiary for a year.

Originally, Morrison was charged with intoxication, but an agent for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals later investigated neighbors' complaints, and added the cruelty count.

Zeppelin Arrives After Stormy Trip

Lakehurst, N. J., May 20 (INS)—Completing its second westward crossing of the Atlantic, the giant dirigible Hindenburg landed at the naval station here at 5:03 a.m. today.

The cruise of the big ship was fixed to last nearly most exactly 77 hours 25 minutes after leaving Friedrichshafen, Frankfort-on-Main, Germany.

HATS, HUGE AND DAFFY, LIKED

Crisp, dark fabrics with lots of lavish white touches is the formula for town chic, the Fashion Congress ruled yesterday.

The new prestige of cottons – such as printed pique, cotton lace and crush-resisting linen – was another important outcome of yesterday's weekly session in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

Huge hats, as daffy and exciting as you dare to wear, are an important dash in the recipe for this summer's smartness, the socialite jurors decreed.

The gay background of the Ritz roof garden was the setting for this week's fashion session. The horseshoe-shaped judge table was placed in the center of the brilliantly decorated roof which overlooks the Charles river and Public Garden.

It was an appropriate background for the sophisticated "Summer in Town" clothes modeled and discussed during the luncheon.

Mrs. Whiting Willaurr of Dedham, smartly dressed young society matron, headed the list of jurors.

The others were Mrs. Mark Hopkins, Mrs. William S. Tavior, Mrs. George Day, Mrs. John H. Harwood, Jr., Mrs. Charles W. Birtler, Mrs. W. Knowles Gray, Mrs. Hamilton Heard, Mrs. Edward M. Douglas, Mrs. John Marshall, Mrs. William Faversham and Mrs. A. H. B. Peabody.

Dark for Daytime

The inviolable rule for town wear, the judges agreed, is Wear only dark colors in the daytime. White or light accessories, yes, and lots of them, but keep the main color dark.

One of the judges went so far as to say that she would not wear light clothes in town unless she were in an emergency like having to rush the baby to a doctor!

After dark, clothes are an entirely different matter. When you go dancing in town, wining and dining at a roof garden or sidewalk cafe, wear the lightest, flimsiest frock you can buy.

An evening dress of white embroidered organdie, dainty as a christening robe, sent the judges into raptures of praise. Miss Blanche O'Riorden, tall and graceful debutante, modeled this dress with its yards and yards of skirt stiffened with horse-hair and a tender clump of pink hydranges.

A dreamy printed crepa dress with delicate yellow and brown flowers on a background of white was another roof garden fashion which won approval. Carolyn Pierce, another lovely debutante, modeled this dress and with it a sophisticated box jacket of yellow sharkskin.

Sharkskin Good

The sharskin jacket is one of the new versatile fashions which hangs their degree of formality with the dress worn with it. Perfectly correct, the judges decided with a formal summer daytime dress and even a casual sports frock.

Marietta Howe, one of yesterday's socialite mannequins, showed in what amazingly clever guises cotton is appearing this season. Her dress was a black and white printed pique which had all the worldliness of silk yet was cool and comfortable as a tennis dress.

With it she wore an adorable off-the-face hat edged with white cotton rick-rack. The ensemble proved what a fashion-Cinderella cotton has become!

An amusing and highly practical town-wear dress was modeled by Miss Betsy Jacques, tall and attractive socialite mannequin. Blue polka dot crepe was the fabric. A zipper from neck to hem and a coquettish white pique petticoat were the fashion touches which delighted the jurors.

9 Stores Exhibit

Miss Annice Brink, fashion editor of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, was the commentator.

Stores which exhibited clothes at yesterday's session were Lawson and Hubbard, Theodore, Inc., Jordan Marsh Company, Kennedy's, T. Slattery Company, Jacob Crawford Hollidge, Manahan, and R. H. White Company.

Photographs of summer clothes which were awarded Fashion Congress tags were taken following the session. These will be published daily in the fashion pages of the American and Sunday Advertiser for a week, beginning tomorrow.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ruth Mugglebee

SO HELP ME—

But, an effusive Back-Bay bride and her devoted spouse spent half of their limited honeymoon in a seed store last Mother day, selecting the bridegroom's wedding gift of a vegetable garden with much zest and enthusiasm. I was garden-shopping, too. Hence, the eavesdropping.

RUTH MUGGLEBEE

And Boston June brides who are trudging altarward choose the simplest, most classical gowns, while girls whose names do not grace the social register, and whose dads are not comfortably rolling in the grade, are spending as much as $1000 on their trousseaux. I have the word of a well-known Tremont street stylist for it.

The Arabo Stables' sport colors of black and white because, Mrs. Walter O'Hara, wife of the Narragansett Park chieftain, wears ONLY black and white in every bit of apparel. Yep, even to those dainty unmentionables.

And, Stable Senator "Hap" Fenelon, Rhode Island racing commissioner, who is an eligible bachelor with LOADS of charm, has none of the minor vices—he neither smokes nor drinks. But he ought sneak a chew if you offer him his special brand. He's like the man who works in a cotton factory and has to chew something.

Mrs. Dibble's Buggy No Road Show

New York advertisers wanted to dress up Mrs. Florence Dibble's buggy like a road sign on the straightaway when she recently took her buggy ride for fame to Atlantic City. Telling of how she was beset by the moguls who believe in the power of the printed word, she revealed one firm wanted to tie a whiskey ad on the back of the buggy, while another wanted her to place a can of coffee on the front seat beside her. Yes, indeedy!

It was late in the afternoon and a reporter (not I, heaven forbid) and a few friends suddenly, as reporters do, got the idea of a few cooling drinks.

The "leg-man" was certain that his two corpuscles of Southern blood equipped him to make a perfect mint julep. Finally a trayful of the glass-frosted beverage was made. But with sudden reluctance, they didn't want to spoil the illusion by sipping the fluid.

A happy thought came to the reporter. Gallantly he went into the kitchen and offered one of the valuables to the dusky maid whose all-Bos'n beam makeup should have made her a critical judge. The party waited in suspense.

The sound of a beverage being sucked heartily through a straw penetrated the inner room. Then there was the tinkle of glass. Then an ominous silence. At last, yes, at last, the maid appeared at the doorway and slowly surveyed those assembled.

Dramatic pause—

"WAH HOO!" she boomed and made a hasty exit.

Cute?

Mr. Boston Squire In Action June 15

By Jack Conway

JACK SHARKEY has signed with the Goodwin A. C. to clash with Phil Brubaker at Fenway Park on June 15.

Brubaker will not give his final okay to the match until after his tussle with Andre Lenglet in San Francisco on Friday night.

Mr. Boston

The Sharkey-Brubaker bout has been hanging fire for several months. Coast promoters as well as promoters in New York have been seeking this contest.

Matchmaker "Rip" Valenti of the Goodwin Club has been secretly angling for the tussle and it looks as if he has the edge on the field.

Sharkey's signed contract is already in Valenti's safe, while Brubaker is expected to wire his acceptance of final terms after his tussle with Lenglet.

I understand Brubaker will receive a guarantee of $5000 with $1000 additional for expenses. Sharkey's contract calls for 25 per cent of the receipts.

BRUBAKER

BRUBAKER, 21 years old, is a heavyweight sensation of the first water. He is rated as a more prominent fighter than Max Baer was while the latter was battling for title recognition.

Brubaker has scored a couple of victories over King Levinsky. He dropped the Kingfish to the floor a couple of times with his powerful right-hand punch.

Coast experts believe that Brubaker will be the challenger for Joe Louis in 1937 in the event the latter wins the world's championship this year by defeating Jimmy Braddock.

If the Brubaker-Sharkey bout is definitely closed Friday night, the Coast heavyweight will start for Boston early next week and establish a training camp here. Brubaker feels that victory over Sharkey will put him in a spot for the big money.

Sharkey, back from a fishing trip to New Hampshire, has started training at Buckley's Gym. Sharkey argues that if he can win over Brubaker that he will skyrocket in a bout with Joe Louis.

"My chief reason for staging a come back," Sharkey told me today, "was to meet Joe Louis. I saw him fight Max Baer and feel I can lick him.

"I have now had three tune up bouts, and believe I am ready to step out and take on the first flight heavyweights."

ROBERT

TYON Robert isn't remaining ... merely because Danno O'... refuses to give him a cr... $10,000 diamond studded ... ship wrestling belt. The ener... Frenchman is taking on all-comers throughout the East and in Canada and continues to pile up victories.

I believe Robert is showing good judgment in keeping active. Many challengers make the mistake of keeping out of the ring until they get their shot at the champion. They are fearful that if they win the they will meet with defeat. The policy causes them to get in rag trust.

Jimmy McLarnin's recent defeat by Tony Canzoneri in a boxing bout was due to inactivity as much as anything else. McLarnin has had very little boxing during the past three years. As a result he has slowed down and his judgment of distance is poor.

In the first round of his meeting with Canzoneri, McLarnin scored with a terrific right to the jaw which almost knocked Tony out. McLarnin tried to follow up his advantage and barraged with lefts and rights for the head in a desperate effort to count with a quick knockout.

McLarnin has grown old and wealthy in the game and apparently has lost the urge for fighting.

Robert, on the other hand, is young and hungry for glory and money. Which explains his activity on the mat.

MILEY Miss Put OUT

LOSES TO MISS NEWELL, 4 AND 3

Southport, Eng., May 20 (AP)—Pam Barton, 19-year-old British golfer, went into the finals of the British women's golf championship for the third straight year here today by defeating Kathleen Garnham, 5 and 4, in the semi-finals.

Southport, Eng., May 20 (AP)—Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., was defeated in the quarter finals of the British women's golf championship by Bridget Newell, the favorite, 4 and 3, here this morning, ending another chapter in America's long and unsuccessful attempt to win the British title.

Miss Newell met Kathleen Garnham and Molly Gourlay faced Pam Barton in the semi-final round this afternoon. All are Britishers.

Miss Gourlay, twice winner of the English ladies' closed championship, defeated Jessie Hamilton one up this morning, and Miss Garnham advanced by beating Mrs. Edith Rhodes, 4 and 3.

Miss Miley was one down at the turn, but started back with three pars, five over par, and lost all three holes. She managed to cut this lead to three on the 14th when she got a par 5. Miss Newell's four, but she slipped again on the short 15th and Miss Newell won the hole and the match with a par.

Miss Barton Wins

Kathleen Garnham and Pam Barton, two of England's finest young golfers, also advanced and were drawn against each other in this afternoon's semi-final.

Miss Garnham, the 31-year-old star from London, former Essex champion, defeated Mrs. Edith Rhodes 4 and 3, and Miss Barton, a girl of 19 years, who has been runner-up in the championship for the past two years, defeated Dorothy Wicks, 3 and 2.

Both Miss Barton and Miss Garnham won with great golf on the back nine. The former played the last four holes of the match in two under fours, while the latter played the last five of hers in two under fours.

Miss Miley lost mainly through poor play with her irons. She constantly half-hit her iron shots through the fairway and fell far short. British critics, watching in the gallery, were astonished that she did not switch to her short woods instead of using the long irons. Her play with the woods was perfect.

Off Game

Even so, the modest Bridget Newell insisted that her American opponent had "quite atrocious luck."

Miss Newell said, "at the last hole, for example, she hit a really fine shot, but the wind brought it back into the worst possible spot in the bunker."

Miss Miley had no alibi, however.

"I simply wasn't playing well and deserved to lose," she said. "Miss Newell is a fine golfer."

In the other quarter-final match, Molly Gourlay played a great 71 to win 1 up from Jean Hamilton. She met Miss Newell in an all-British semi-final, in the afternoon.

Landis Makes Curt Reply to Madigan

Chicago, May 20 (INS)—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball, will take no action on the protest of E. P. Madigan, director of athletics at St. Mary's College, St. Mary's, Cal., against alleged big league proselyting, it was revealed today.

Madigan charged the New York Yankees with violating baseball's unwritten law by signing Francis Kelleher, St. Mary's star sophomore third baseman, claiming a Yankee scout induced Kelleher to leave college with an offer of $350 per month salary and a bonus of $2500 to report to a Yankee farm.

Judge Landis declared:

"That gentleman (Madigan) first gave the protest to the newspapers. The protest finally reached me. He seems to have got what he wanted—publicity. Now I'm not going to answer him to give him more publicity. Good-bye."

GREEN In Last Try AGAINST YALE

By Walter Kiley

Newton's Milton Green hangs up his dual meet collegiate track shoes next Saturday afternoon.

The Harvard captain, a real leader, with Olympic aspirations, will attempt to duplicate his Greater Boston Intercollegiate, Heptagonal and Dartmouth triumphs by winning the high and low hurdles and broad jump against Yale.

Green makes his first Olympic bid in the semi-final trials at the Stadium in June, the 400-meters hurdles his immediate objective.

At present he jointly holds the world marks in the 45, 50 and 60-meter high hurdles. He makes his last college try at the I. C. 4-A games at Philadelphia May 30.

Harvard should and probably will win from the Ells handily, with Green as important factor with three firsts already conceded him.

Holy Cross rates the call in the New England Intercollegiates which open with Friday trials and close with Saturday finals at Brown's Aldrich Field, Providence.

The Purple boasts sufficient point-getters in the sprints together with a liberal sprinkling of money-men in the other events to beat out Rhode Island State in fairly convincing fashion.

Most of the experts anticipate a double for the Purple's Larry Scanlan. They expect him to win the 100 and 220-yard dashes despite the fact that he will be opposed by fast fields.

Scanlan, a Lee Daley protege when D. Leo was moulding athletes and men at Englieh High, is undoubtedly the sprint class in these two parts.

Bowdoin's Phil Good is another slated to turn in twin victories, both in the hurdles.

A feature will be the renewal of the feud between Bates of Holy Cross and "Red" Gill of Boston College in the 440-yard run.

Bates was disqualified for fouling Gill in last Saturday's dual meet at University Heights. Gill, failing to the ground over the finish line after Bates had cut over in front of him, was given the decision.

'Smilin' Will' Chases Reds To Hive

Charley Dresser and his Cincinnati Reds move in on the Bee Hive today.

"Smilin' Will," Boston Evening American cameraman, will be on hand for the opening game ceremonies, taking his usual crowd photos, the ones which bring two free tickets to the four persons who have their heads circled in tonight's edition of the great NIGHT PINK FINAL.

National League Park fans are well acquainted now with "Smilin' Will." Whenever he appears on the grandstand or bleacher scene they smile their prettiest.

Four more heads will be circled in tonight's NIGHT PINK FINAL. That means eight more free tickets for later Bees' games.

Should your head be so circled, remember that all you have to do to collect the precious duets is to call in person at the promotion department, 5 Winthrop square, Boston, and on identification the pasteboards will be immediately forthcoming.

TOP TIE In Park LEAGUE PLAY

Although the weather has been disappointing to the twilight leaguers, with the cold spell of last week and the current rainy season, it has provided breathers for some of the clubs and enabled them to gather their forces together to prepare for the coming siege.

In the Boston Park League only one of four games was played last night, but a victory by Kennedy's over the luckless Roslindale Town club, enabled the Summer street storemen to tie their rival retailers, the champion Jordan Marsh club at the top of the heap in the east section.

The program tonight calls for a pair of tilts. Tom Conway will have his City Hospital gang ready at the Eustis street grounds in Roxbury and promises to surprise Barney McDermott and his west division leaders.

The other clash finds Bill Benson and the St. Augustine team meeting the revivified St. Lazarus crowd at Noyes Park in East Boston.

Four contests are on the bill for tomorrow, with co-features being the Wolf-Kennedy clash at the Fens stadium and the Jordan—Hennigan setto at Jefferson Playground in Roxbury. The Maddens go to Nsponet to meet Dick Casey's boys, and the City Hospital nine meets Roslindale Town at Healy Field.

Charlie, as you know, is manager of the Chicago Cubs. And even more to the point he is to be manager of the National League All-Stars who meet the American League All-Stars at the Beehive on July 7.

Grimm won that appointment by virtue of piloting the Cubs to the world series last fall.

Before hitting the rails for the Brooklyn series opening today, Grimm stated:

"The American and Advertiser All-Star contest provides a fine chance for baseball fans to test their knowledge of the game. It will do much to stimulate interest in this worthwhile charity contest.

"Furthermore fans get a chance to win a real fine prize. Those Gruen Curvex watches are mighty fine. I know for I've had my eye on one for a long, long time. Wish I could enter the contest myself."

The contest, itself, is picking up at an amazing rate. Entries continue to mount.

The rules are so simple that both men and women fans are getting a tremendous thrill out of it. All that is required is to guess the nine starting players on each team, their positions and the batting order.

Those who either name or come closest to naming the starting lineups will receive Gruen Precision, 17-jewel wrist watches, modern time pieces and things of beauty. Every one of them retails at 50 dollars.

Psychology Potent Tennis Factor

By HELEN WILLS MOODY

In a tennis match, there is a "situation" in almost every rally. It is what makes the game so much fun to play.

Sometimes, however, there will be a situation which will be the dominant feature of a match. One which will arouse your curiosity, and which you will try to interpret, not only from the point of view of the game itself, but as well from those aspects of thoughts and influence which are part of the mind in wider fields, in which an incident in a game of tennis can be only a most infinitesimal happening, but still related to it by the human equation.

As an illustration of this I recall one of the most thrilling and intriguing matches that I have ever seen—one between William Tilden and Henri Cochet at Wimbledon some years ago. I have forgotten the score, but the essence of the match is as clear in my mind as if it had happened yesterday. Curiously enough, had both players been less experienced in the game of tennis, the outcome would probably have been different.

But both Tilden and Cochet had played in many tournaments. And they had often played against each other. So that there was nothing new to either of them.

Tilden knew from experience that the only way for him to defeat Cochet would be with long deep powerful drives to the baseline which would gradually work the Frenchman out of position, and keep him away from the net. Cochet, on his part, knew from experience that in order to beat Tilden, he would have to go to the net as soon as he could in every rally.

TILDEN STRATEGY WORKS

One felt that were Tilden able to maintain the ascendency in carrying out his plan, he would be the winner. It meant that his game would have to be well nigh perfect. And so it was.

As the match went on, one could not but wonder at the perfection of his play. The accuracy and speed of his serves. The severity, the length, and the placement of his drives, which were passing the net at a low trajectory, allowing only the smallest margin of safety. But obviously, human beings cannot be machines, and therefore not perfect during a long-continued effort. There came a break in his game, but not until the match was almost his. He had only a few more points to win. Cochet, quick to see his opportunity, used the momentary uncertainty of Tilden's game as a means for approach to the net, where he was always in his element.

It was logical to suppose that Tilden would regain the accuracy which had left him for the time being, and it was certainly within his power to do so. Strangely enough, it was here that the great store of experience that belonged to Tilden failed him when he could have made the most use of it, because of the fact that he knew he couldn't lose. We knew he couldn't, too. But it was a time when confidence was not as well as wariness. The subsequent winning of this match by Cochet was recorded as one of the great upsets in Wimbledon tennis, and one of the most mysterious.

Paradoxically, as proved by this match, experience may be either a friend or an enemy, because of the confidence that it breeds.

How then can one make the most out of experience?

First, if possible, by not letting it make one over-confident. This does not mean cultivating a false modesty, but rather keeping before one both sides of the picture. If you are far ahead in a match, you should try to remind yourself that the match is not yet over. And if you are behind, you should repeat to yourself that the match is not yet over, because you know from experience that it cannot be finished until the last point is decided. There is a psychological let-down which accompanies over-

Eddie Shore's Dream
Of Hockey Empire
Fails to Come True

EDDIE SHORE, THE HUMAN NEEDLE cushion and hockey hard guy, is suffering from delusions of grandeur that presage the end of his great playing career. He wants to own a piece of the Bruins, or operate them from the bench, and has offered C. F. Adams slightly more than a quarter million in confetti money.

Austen Lake

But he went away thwarted without letting his financial backers, which included Adriel Bird, the butter and egg magnate, Bill Kennedy, the clothing merchant, and Bob Moore, the insurance man, know what the upshot of his bid was. He went back to his Alberta wheat farm a little disgruntled in the thought that he was still a laboring man, nearing the backslope of his hockey career. And he didn't know, he said, whether he would expose his body to the gouges and sprains of the game next winter and he thought his reputation and historic contributions to hockey should be rewarded with an executive job.

This has the familiar ring of Babe Ruth's lament in 1934 when he uprooted himself from the Yankees and offered himself on the open market as a major league manager. It chagrined the Babe that the club owners did not stumble over each other's feet in the scramble to hire him, and after the Braves' fiasco he became embittered and lately said he would punish the game by giving no interviews or otherwise permitting his great name to be exploited in the game that had been thankless for his benefits.

The tendency of great professional athletes, as they approach their gloaming, is to magnify their significance in national life and to feel that their professions owe them a pension. Maranville turned sour last winter when his demand to be saved as a sort of museum relic and to be paid in proportion to his past glories was refused by Bob Quinn. And when he went away he went in a huff, muttering curses on McKechnie and his old playmates.

LINDSTROM'S HEART TROUBLE

THERE IS ALSO THE CASE of Freddy Lindstrom, who has just quit his Brooklyn job at the early age of 31, less a victim of brittle bones than of his three-year-old conflict in ambition with Bill Terry.

When he was in Boston recently Lindstrom confessed to me that he never recovered from the shock of disappointment when Terry, instead of himself, was named to succeed McGraw. He had been given front-office assurance, he said, that he would move into the manager's sanctum on the very day before Terry was summoned to the job and performed, as his first official act, the job of sending Freddy away to Pittsburgh.

"I felt that I was deserving of better treatment," said Freddy, with something akin to a catch in his throat. "And my heart has never been in the game since."

A morbid, introspective type, Freddy has smouldered over this fancied injustice, and though at 31 he should have five or more years of playing strength, his little internal mouse has gnawed away his resolve and left him a hollow husk.

LEFTY'S TROPHY ROOM

IN LEFTY GROVE'S LANACONING, MD., home, a humble hillside house that faces over a deep valley and a winding river, there is a little parlor, kept gloomy with drawn shutters. The family never sits there because the furniture is stiff and in the conventional, pre-Civil War pattern.

It is Lefty's trophy room, where sculptured silver ornaments stand in rows as relics of his major league honors. Tarnished placques and light struck photos hang on the walls. And baseballs, bushels of them, are piled in fruit bowls and raffia baskets. There are hundreds of them, each properly stencilled with a legend commemorating some game in Lefty's career.

The first ball that Lefty ever pitched when he reported to the Athletics in 1925 is there. There is an ink notation on another, "Struck out Ruth four times, June 10, 1928." And though it must be a terrific temptation, Lefty's son, a lad of 13, never touches the sacred mementoes on pain of his sire's wrath.

I mention this because Lefty made no additions to his souvenirs in 1934 and 1935, feeling that the products of his pitching art in that period were unworthy of rubbing their shiny skins against the immortal horsehides of his earlier career. But he is saving the last ball of every shutout game this spring, scrawling the history of the contest on the leather and stowing them for safe keeping in his traveling trunk.

Lefty, back in Boston today to rest for Saturday's Red Sox home-coming, has an earned-run record of .92 per game thus far in 1936, as against his best season's mark of 2.05, when he won 31 games and lost only four in 1931.

NOT THE LEAST OF THE WORRIES at Wonderland's dog track each evening are the number of customers who lose or mislay their auto ignition keys and find themselves stalled on the premises. To cure this trouble, Hugh Bain, one of the associate judges, has invented an ingenius gadget from old coil boxes, which jumps the spark of a motor and assists the car regardless of make or cylinders. Thus key-carele patrons this summer can save gar-ge tow-fees and midnight jitters by applying to the executive office.

AS A PIOUS, ABSTEMIOUS CHARACTER, who would never play ball on the Sabbath or swallow boisterous waters, Branch Rickey, head of the St. Louis Cardinals' chain-club system, has just been named to the Methodist board of temperance, prohibition and public morals. He is also the games' most astute man in a money bargain and a chal system which contrives to get the utmost out of athletes for the least possible outlay, so that other club owners, in dealing with mischievous spir ts, only have to frighten them with threats of being sent to Rickey's reform school to reduce the culprit to a shivering penitent, crying, "Not that. Anything but that."

CRONINS Meet BROWNS

WES FERRELL TO PITCH

By Joe Cashman

St. Louis, May 20—It would seem about time for your envoy to spill a few words in praise of Henry Emmett Manush, the least publicized but to date the most valuable of the Red Sox mid-winter acquisitions.

As the Fenway flock today invades St. Louis, one of "Heinie's" old hang-outs, the Handsome Dutchman stands out the only first-year member of the club who is living up to all the nice things we said about him in the Southland.

If you recall, there appeared a prediction in this corner about two weeks before the rate started to the effect that this veteran fly-chaser might outshine all of Tom Yawkey's more costly importations.

Well, if "Heinie" hasn't done that little thing on this trip, the records are guilty of gross prevarication.

Take the last 10 games, for instance. If it weren't for Manush's contributions, the Sox would never have won six of them. In fact, if they haven't the lowest batting average in the league over that stretch, they can thank their left-fielder.

"Heinie" went to bat 40 times in those 10 tilts and collected 16 hits, including seven doubles and two triples, for an average of a cool .400. A week ago his season's mark was .288. Today it is .317. In the final two games of the series in Chicago, our heroes made nine hits. Five of those were produced by Mr. Manush.

Stars' Marks Poor

And if you want to make a few comparisons, be informed that during the ten games under discussion, the batting marks of the other new regulars in the lineup were as follows.

Foxx, .263; Cramer, .193, and McNair, .184.

The box score doesn't reveal it, but the Sox might never have won the final game in Chicago but for a phenomenal stab against the scoreboard by the Dutchman which robbed Zeke Bonura just before Appling tripled in the sixth inning.

"Heinie," you know, is a friendship's gift to the Red Sox. He was a "roomie" of Joe Cronin at Washington when the boy bons was a private in the ranks. So, when he was put on the market last winter, Joseph had no time in shipping Roy Johnson and Carl Reynolds to Washington to get him.

The critics said the pilot was letting loyalty run away with his judgment. They pointed out that "Heinie" hit only .273 last season, while Johnson hit well over .300 and Reynolds was no weakling with the stick. Consequently, they opined that the deal was a major blunder from a Boston standpoint.

But today Cronin stands vindicated. His 36-year-old pal thus far has been the most valuable member of the team next to Robert Moses Grove.

Not that the other Sox aren't doing pretty well, however. They arrive here today with a clean sweep of the three-game series with the White Sox to their credit, and there doesn't appear any good reason why they shouldn't take both decisions from the last-place Brownies.

Wesley Ferrell gets the nod to start today. He's found the road very inhospitable thus far. In his previous starts on this jaunt he sent to an early shower.

ROCKINGHAM STIRS—Very quiet all during the winter months, "Rock" is now a center of activity. The spring meeting opens next Monday and new horses are coming in every day. Above we see Hennie Hoy and A. O'Connell being cooled off after breezing.

A STUDY IN EXPRESSION. Charley Moore, veteran Rockingham clocker, is on the job as always. Up at the weehours of the dawn each morning he gets to the rail and clocks the gee-gees as their handlers put them through the paces

ROCKINGHAM COMES TO LIFE AFTER QUIET WINTER

CHAPLIN Hurls at HIVE

TEAM LEAVES TOMORROW

By Bill Grimes

After breaking even with each of the other three Western clubs, the Bees open a two game series today with the Cincinnati Reds, determined to start their next road trip tomorrow night in fifth place with an average of an even .500.

Prior to returning to The Hive, the Bees have played 10 games. They took the odd game of a three tilt series with the Dodgers, won, lost and drew with the Pirates and split with both the Cardinals and the Cubs.

The Bees and the Reds are practically deadlocked for fifth place. The Red were taking out after [illegible] when a nine Dutton Reserve of Manager Frank Frisch's Cincinnati [illegible] Pirates to prove. Casey Stengel and the Reds dropped two [illegible] to the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds and in Philadelphia.

Changes Lineup

On the Eastern trip, Manager Casey Stengel has changed pitchers in every game. And he has been shaking up his lineup and batting order with much frequency. Al Hollingsworth, the big southern [illegible] he on the mound for the Reds this afternoon. Al worked seven innings against Brooklyn Sunday and was credited with the victory. He received credit for [illegible] in relief that game. [illegible] Lloyd Dietrich in relief for Augusta Mc[illegible] veteran had pitched to two batters. On his previous time out, Hollingsworth was driven off the hill [illegible] in the fifth inning by the Phillies and replaced by Lee Stine, who ruined whatever chances the Reds had of a victory by yielding seven hits in two [illegible].

Jim "Tiny" Chaplin will pitch for the Bees. Chaplin pitched a fine game against the Pirates earlier in the week, winning 2 to 1. He hurled shut-out ball until the ninth. Chaplin has had plenty of experience and should be able to maneuver his way to a win over the Reds, to whom the Bees have not lost a game [illegible].

The Bees ruined the gamblers yesterday when they overcame a

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS FOR TODAY

Tuesday was another bad day with my two choices failing to grace the winner's circle. VIRBET ran third in the first at Narragansett while BOSTON BROOK ran second in the fifth at the same track.

The bankroll is now $427.40 going into the forty-second day of the experiment. Here's hoping for winners this afternoon.

I'm betting $5 to win on LITTLE MIRACLE in the Betsy Williams Stakes, Narragansett's filly feature. This fast stepping miss, the property of Marshall Field of Chicago, has been shipped here special for this engagement.

BARNSTORMER in the third at Hagerstown, looms as a safe wager. It's $5 to win here.

(At the suggestion of Walter O'Hara, Miss Marsters has set out to determine that conservative bets can result in satisfactory profits, or at most small losses. Walter O'Hara, Narragansett Park owner, provided the capital with a $1000 gift. Half was turned over to the Boston Evening American Christmas Fund immediately. The remainder will be similarly handled at the end of the experiment. This is the forty-second day.)

ANN MARSTERS' BETS

$5 win Barnstormer, Hagerstown 3rd.

$5 win Little Miracle, Narragansett 6th.

BANKROLL IS NOW $427.40. DAY'S PLAY $10.

COLLYER'S SPORT OF KINGS COMMENT

Widener Entry Belmont Best | Talked About 'Gansett Ace

By BERT E. COLLYER

Copyright, 1936, by Collyer's News Bureau

Belmont Park: Down at Horse Haven the fat is in the fire—we mean get ready to ankle over to your favorite "Corner" and plant a kupla megs on the Widener entry to bring home the bacon in the fourth.

MAGIC CIRCLE is the chief reliance of the "Big Boss."

Also for your further information, real smart money appeared in Philadelphia and Jersey. DIZZY DANE, which beat the Magic Miss last time, is the logical favorite and possible contender, with MISAPPREHENSION seeming to dig the route safe.

Oh yes the "Suicide Club" were active on SANTIQUARANTI, a mighty level-headed jumper. One thing about these lads is, they make few mistakes and don't try to bring 'em from the cellar pole. The JACOBS-ADRIAN ENTRY in the third looks good, though the betting was some activity for ACAUTAW, on which Wright has been engaged. GALLANT MAC which worked 4 mile in 1 39, in preparation for today's effort, looks like an "eagle bird." Yewwkkum.

At 'Gansett

Down at "Little Rhodie," AEGIS was passed along as "one of the greatest horses of the meeting." Taking a line through that last effort I make this hide win by open day, eh.

ST. MORITZ is finer than SPLIT SILK, while DEAN SWIFT'S last was an excellent line. This way figured, I am stringing with DOGMATA to beat BLUE DAY. Of course, if it turns muddy then TARN TRICK moves up—considerably.

TALKED ABOUT, which is "Days— XXX special, seems to have one decidable call in fourth. This is a real nice hide, and Jersey and Pittsburgh are "loaded."

LITTLE MIRACLE, which has shown some exceptionally good works of late is the clocker's special in the sixth and I like her EXTRA well.

At Beulah

Over at Beulah Park the Hotels Totale is none other than Donna James. Now if rain should come, then this hide will probably "Smother" this field. Oh, yes, Inspection, in the closing dash, has a comfortable shade over these. More anon.

AEGIS WILSON'S BEST BET

GELDING Goes in FIRST

By Dave Wilson

(Selections made for fast track)

BEST BET—AEGIS, 1ST RACE

Narragansett Park, May 20—Little Miracle, pint-sized filly from the New York stables of Mr. Nightingale, is the observer's choice to take off with major honors in the $3000 added Betsy Williams Stakes, mile and seventy yards feature here today.

Going to string along with Aegis in the first event. This fleet thing is fit and ready to grace the winning circle. It can stand a lot of watching.

FIRST RACE

Aegis, St. Moritz, Ina Dear

AEGIS is descending the scale and should easily annex the record defeat by Wee While. The Ascot colorbearer shapes up as the outstanding hazard on the card. Attention, if any, should be furnished by ST. MORITZ. The latter's advances may be looked for while INA DEAR figures well up on 50 cent good Jamaica form.

SECOND RACE

Civil War, Sir Ten, Little Dinah.

CIVIL WAR, barely nosed out by Granny's Trade, performed as if a trifle shy on racing condition in that recent endeavor. SIR TEN holds plenty of class and has benefited by a good tightening in much better company. LITTLE DINAH was pitted too ambitiously in recent races. SHOULD do better here.

THIRD RACE

Blue Day, Playful Martha, Sun Teatime

BLUE DAY, in general form, shapes up nicely supporter to the $1750 top and $1450 bottom posters in this affair. PLAYFUL MARTHA, the main danger, was up against it in her last. SUN TEA TIME comes highly recommended by the clockers.

FOURTH RACE

Cardinalis, Talked About, Percent

CARDINALIS will have the call over Harry Richards in the Boniface house and should easily score for his recent defeat in the Warren Hill Handicap. Chunking TALKED ABOUT, run against Conservative in the Worcester, is strictly the dark horse. PERCENT is rapidly improving you... in the remainder.

FIFTH RACE

Lady Higloss, Stocks, New Deal

LADY HIGLOSS stepped six furlongs in 1 10 3-5 to easily beat Sandy Point and other added starters last Saturday. Only [illegible] last performance leaves a [illegible] this number. STOCKS [illegible] away from the post in a race [illegible] but he holds plenty of class.

SIXTH RACE

Little Miracle, Sea Cradle, Sunrap

LITTLE MIRACLE, on general form, stands head and shoulders over this smart 3-y-o. She can only to repeat any one of her previous New York efforts in order to return the winner. SEA CRADLE, a top-flight filly of last season, will be making her 1936 debut. Comes highly recommended by the clockers. SUNRAP, a scion from the gate, may hang on long enough to save the place end.

SEVENTH RACE

Polo Bar, Hickory Lad, Moralist.

POLO BAR, pitted a trifle unfavorably in recent endeavors, is beautifully spotted in this $1600 top and $1400 bottom six over HICKORY LAD and MORALIST are the main dangers.

EIGHTH RACE

Chrysela, Movie Lass, Bushy.

CHRYSELA came far out of the clouds to finish a fast going third to Coya and Golden Effort in a swiftly-run six furlongs only a few days back. MOVIE LASS, the main danger, displayed fine form in placing to Fairest Flag last trip. BUSHY shapes up next best.

Ryder Prepares

Coach Jack Ryder is grooming a pair of crack sprinters, Joe Kenny and Ed Cady, for the New England Intercollegiates in which the Eagle track mens hope to gain revenge on Larry Scanlon, Holy Cross flash who trimmed them last week.

IT IS LADIES' DAY AT NARRAGANSETT

FILLIES Race in FEATURE

ENTRY LIST HAS CLASS

Pawtucket, R. I., May 20—The fair sex of the thoroughbred colony will be given a chance to display their wares today in the Betsy Williams Stakes, $3,000 added event of the mile-and-seventy card which has attracted seven of the leading fillies stabled here.

Today's filly stake will be the first contested in New England and it is the fulfillment of a promise made last winter by Racing Secretary Pat Horgan to the Thoroughbred Club at Lexington, Ky.

It seems the club members had deplored the scarcity of opportunities given by racing secretaries of the country to members of the weaker equine sex. So Horgan set out to accomplish what these owners and breeders were seeking.

Classy Entrants

And the list of entrants in the Betsy Williams is a tribute to Horgan. George Odum has sent the highly regarded Son Cradle, property of Marshall Field 3d, Narragansett to contest the event. George Seabo will have the mount on Sea Cradle.

Probable favorite in the field will be Mr. Nightingale's fast stepping miss, Little Miracle, a filly that has displayed a high brand of speed on several occasions in New York. One of her recent starts was a victory over Hal Price, Headley's Sparta at Jamaica.

Other entrants include Forkstecher Farm's Sunray, Hal Price Headley's Pelerine M. A. G. Tarn's Miss Bam, Mongolian Stable's Opera Boufte, and C. V. Whitney's Tony's Wife.

Seven other races are carded, including the Greenville Handicap, a six furlongs sprint for three-year-olds and upward. Lady Highboss, Stocks and New Deal shape up as the main contenders for the top award.

four run deficit and knocked off the Chicago Cubs 6 to 5.

After the Cubs got a Ray Benge for four runs in the third, the "boys" were ballyhoo-ing that "twenty" hit got a "homer, if the Bees win." And, that's just what they did. They came back in their very longest style in the 5-16 mile, ½ mile, and the Derby distance of 7-16.

It has often appeared to the race fan that had some races been longer, dogs coming fast from the rear could have overtaken the winner. The long distance runner, too, many believe, gives a better race as it gives the canine ample opportunity to demonstrate what is in him.

The matter of longer races has already been studied by Managing Director Russell Murray, who visited all of the Florida tracks last winter and discussed the problem with the leading kennel operators.

The matter needs considerable thought, because of the fact that there are several men and women who train their greyhounds especially for the sprints or shorter distances.

Whether or not there will be new distances run at the beach track has not been definitely decided by Manager Murray. He will make an announcement concerning the matter some time before the opening date.

Haines and Carnera Battle Wednesday

BOMBER NO. 2 IN LIMELIGHT

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

New York, May 20 (INS)—At Madame Bey's celebrated flatic training camp near Summit, New Jersey, a prodigious man has been making a prodigious effort the past few weeks to achieve what Charley Dryden used to call the P. of C.

Meaning the pink of condition.

If this prodigious man achieves just a shade off the pink, say, peach, he will be doing better than is his color custom in the matter of condition.

The prodigious man is Signor Primo Carnera, the far-famed Leaning Tower of Sequals, better known as "Old Satch." He has been training at Madame Bey's for a fight at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, next Wednesday night.

It may be the Leaning Tower's last stand. Students of the laws of gravitation tell us that a leaning tower can lean just so far. Well, Signor Primo Carnera, the Leaning Tower of Sequals, has been leaning that far for some time.

The event next Wednesday night will be the formal unveiling in these parts of one Leroy Haynes, of California and Pennsylvania, who is claiming consideration as Brown Menace, No. 2. Joe Louis is generally conceded the position of Brown Menace, No. 1. You will observe that the old black has changed to brown in the menacing business.

Needs New Fodder

This Haynes popped into public notice over in Philly last winter by swatting Signor Primo Carnera on the jaw. He is said to have been trying to fatten Leroy's record on Louis' left-overs, which is lean nourishment, at best. They would have done better by their man had they hunted up fresh fodder for him.

Their idea was that they could attract attention to Haynes by flattering Louis' old opponents in speedier time than Louis. The trouble with this idea was that the pugilistic proletariat felt that a man who had met Louis ought to thereafter remain in a convalescent home, and not be around fighting.

Haynes Strong

Haynes is a big, brawny colored chap, young, and strong, and has had plenty of experience. He is a good puncher with his right hand, as Signor Primo Carnera can jolly well testify. Haynes may be no Joe Louis, but a Louis has come along just once in many years in the way of the ring, so that's no knock.

Haynes appears to be the best colored heavyweight, next to Louis, since the days when Jack Johnson, Sam Langford, Joe Jeannette and Sam McVey were the big black four of boxing. He may be as good as Harry Wills the brown panther of New Orleans, who reigned after their time.

Haynes was twice defeated by Al Ettore, a white heavy of Philadelphia, but since then the colored man has undoubtedly come on. After he stopped Carnera, they fed him Nate Brown, the last man to go ten rounds with Louis, but it was a hog-fat Brown who took a couple of days off from a regular job in Washington for this fight, and Haynes' easy knockout of Nathaniel was no boost to Haynes.

Then he stopped Ford Smith, a good win, and Patsy Perroni, which was just so-so. He was matched with George Godfrey, the old black shadow of Leiperville, who has some sort of claim to the heavyweight championship of Europe, but the fight didn't come off.

Haynes is a longer puncher than Louis. He pulls back with his right before letting it go. Louis punches travel just a few inches, and there is no preliminary warning. They simply explode.

Fought on Coast

Haynes did considerable fighting on the Pacific Coast before he drifted to Philadelphia. He got slapped around by Maxie Rosenbloom, but Haynes was just learning how then. He is 90 per cent improved now over his Coast form. He has more finish and more confidence.

DOGS Just Around CORNER

By Sam Cohen

The first of a long series of schooling races, or trial performances for the more than 500 racing greyhounds booked for the summer meeting at Wonderland Park, Revere, will start early next week, Managing Director Murray announced today.

The beach track raises the curtain for the 1936 racing season on June 3.

The schooling will continue through to opening night. Scores of the country's best-known kennels are already quartered in Revere, Malden, Everett, and Saugus, and are ready to put their champions through the preliminary tests.

Included among the early arrivals at the beach are such noted owners as Doc Auston, whose greyhound racing Mutton Roll has taken top purses on tracks throughout the United States; Dan Oswald, whose famous Police Court has captured high honors in Massachusetts and Florida; Mrs. Freda Koontz, Chicago lawyer and "X" secretary, owner of the celebrated trio of the canine world, Sky, Melodrama, and Extra; and Bud Sundby, full-blooded Indian owner and trainer from Tulsa, Oklahoma, whose greyhound, The Motorman, has been one of the most popular racers at the beach oval last year.

Triple Schooling

Each dog will be schooled at Wonderland at least three times and the results of the performances will be available on the first night's program. The dogs will be schooled from the quarter-mile, futurity, an 5-16 mile distance.

There seems to be a growing tendency among greyhound followers that the quarter-mile route should be eliminated as the distance is too short for a good dog to prove his worth. Owners themselves favor longer races such as the 5-16 mile, ½ mile, and the Derby distance of 7-16.

15 Eagles Off For N. Y. Games

Fifteen members of the Boston College baseball team, including six pitchers, one catcher, five infielders and three outfielders, take the boat tonight for New York City, where the Eagles will meet three of the best teams in eastern collegiate ranks this weekend.

The pitchers who will be called on to turn back St. John's, N. Y. U. and Fordham, are Ted Galligan, Charlie Marao, Harry Lane, "Muggsie" Kelley, Fred Bonin, and Bob Cash. Charlie Fallon will complete the battery as catcher in all three tilts.

confidence which is a menace to one's best expression, until one learns to recognize it as such.

I believe that there is, in the world of sport, a very interesting field for study on the part of those people who desire to know how our minds work. And that students could learn quite painlessly, because they are interested in sport, a number of philosophical and psychological truths in sport, which would belong not only to games but to the wider field of human experience as well.

Arena Card

MAIN BOUT

George K. O. Koverly, Los Angeles, vs. Angelo Cistoldi, Italy. (Two falls out of three—American Association rules.)

SEMI-FINAL

Bob "Bibber" McCoy, Cambridge, vs. Count George Zarynoff, Grafton. (One fall to win—30 minute time limit.)

SPECIAL BOUTS

Henry Piers, Harlem, Holland, vs. John Spellman, Boston.

Steve Brady, Holyoke, vs. Jumping Joe Kujot, Montreal. (One fall to win—30 minute time limit.)

PRELIMINARIES

Johnny Bayley, New York, vs. Gene Dubuc, Springfield.

Hermi Olson, Minneapolis, vs. Al Peckham, Dorchester.

Heinie Ehlers, Minneapolis, vs. Joe Allario, New York. (One fall to win—15 minute time limit.)

Angelo Cistoldi's rise to the top of the wrestling world may be halted tonight at the Boston Arena when he meets George K. O. Koverly in the feature of an Alex MacLean show which promises action from start to finish.

Equipped with a spectacular hold, the "octopus hold" which may shortly be classed with other famous wrestling maneuvers as the Irish whip, scissors, headlock and flying tackle, Cistoldi has gone along unbeaten since his return to this country from Australia where he developed the "octopus hold."

Koverly, a young giant who recently graduated from boxing ranks, packs a k. o. punch in each hand and is not the least bit hesitant about putting it on display.

Prelims Good

The semifinal looms as a smashing bout with Bob "Bibber" McCoy, New England's heavyweight champion, stepping in against Count George Zarynoff, the ever-popular Russian elastic man. It will be a battle of flying tackles and blinding speed, which is enough to insure plenty of heavy damage.

John "King Kong" Spellman runs into trouble in one special bout meeting Henry Piers, the long, lean giant from Haarlem, Holland, who makes them sour with a variety of scissors holds. In another special bout Steve Brady will clash with Jumping Joe Kujot, who like Ray, has adopted Joe Savoldi's drop-kick as his chief knock-out.

In preliminaries the Olson twins from Minneapolis will take on Dorchester and Montreal meeting Al Peckham, Dorchester strong boy, and Heinie clashing with Joe Allario. Close watch will be kept on the Olsons to keep them from any switching. In another prelim John Baxter, newcomer, will face the blocky, bruising Gene Dubuc.

New England Police Stories

Strange Case Of Terengo

As Told by Ace Crime Reporters

This is the 106th in a series of true murder-mystery stories from New England police and court annals being published daily in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

James Dooling, one of the ace reporters for the American and Sunday Advertiser, relates this gripping story of "The Strange Case of Antonio Terenge."

By JAMES DOOLING

The story of Antonio Terengo begins where most murder tales end—at the prison door that leads to a straight backed chair and eternity.

It begins on the night of April 6th, 1920 in cell number one of the death house at state prison.

The head of Antonio Terenzo, convicted of murder in the first degree, had just been shaved. The trousers of his prison uniform had been slit to the knees. At one minute past midnight he would walk a few feet from his cell and the story of his life would be over.

He was not reconciled to death but he was ready to meet it.

Calvin Coolidge, then governor of the state, had already declared he would take no action to save the Italian youth from the chair.

But Frank Zottoli, counsel for the condemned man, had just discovered something which he felt changed the whole aspect of the case.

Stay by Warden

In a few words he told Warden Elmer Shattuck of the nature of his findings. To the latter there seemed only one course open.

He called the press to his office.

"Gentlemen," he announced, "I have learned that there is new evidence in this case. It is within my power to delay execution until sunrise Saturday morning. Terengo will not die tonight."

Terengo had been convicted in Springfield October 9, 1918, of murdering Raffaele Cammerota. Joseph B. Ely, then district attorney for that section, had prosecuted the case.

Sentencing did not take place until December 23, 1919, as defense counsel fought for exception after exception.

With the arrival of his client at Charlestown on March 20, 1920, Zotoli had redoubled his efforts.

A special plea to Governor Coolidge had been his first step but this was refused two days later. Terengo took the news quietly.

On the last day of the month Zotoli filed a writ of error demanding a review of the findings on the ground that testimony had left the manner of the victim's death one of conjecture. It further alleged that the Supreme Judicial Court had never fixed a receptor to the case.

The writ was denied.

Two days before the execution Lewis R. Sullivan, a member of the Governor's Council, became interested in the case.

As a result of a talk with two of the jury which had convicted Terengo, Sullivan personally ordered them to the Governor's office.

Details of the conference were not made known at the time. But once again Governor Coolidge announced that he would not interfere in the case.

A letter from the youth's mother in Italy to the Governor was made public:

"My poor son left home when he was scarcely 17 years of age and was forced to go far from us to help us in our poverty.

"He has always been good and never had done anything wrong. He was always kind to us and sent us money regularly."

Easter Sunday the doomed man spent in prayer and meditation.

Then came the precedent-breaking stay by the warden.

Zottoli now had three days in which to fight for Terengo's life.

On the second day he went before Judge Nelson P. Brown, who had originally sentenced his client, and was heard on his motion for a new trial.

The motion was based on the affidavits of two jurors that there had been irregularities concerning the supervision of the jury.

This, on Thursday, April 8, Judge Brown had previously announced:

"I have set a definite time for the execution but I cannot make it public."

It was generally felt that the warden would delay until the last possible moment but the tension at the prison, and reflected in the press, mounted steadily.

Terengo faced the ordeal bravely but a deathly pallor crept over his face.

On the afternoon of that day there occurred another precedent shattering move.

Terengo was taken from the death house, his bald head evidence of the fate still hanging over him, and placed in the prisoner's cage in the superior criminal court.

Desperate Plea

James Francis Tucker, juror from Springfield, was the first to take the stand.

Zottoli, assisted by Attorney [illegible] von Martinelli, fired question after question concerning the conduct of his fellow jurors during the trial.

Q—Did the jury have to take the elevator to go to its rooms?
A—"Ordinarily."

Q—Did you ever see one of the jurors, in the evening, in conversation with the elevator girl?
A—"Yes."

"Were they alone in the elevator?" A—"Yes."

Q—"Were the sheriffs around?"
A—"One of them was in close proximity, but in another room."

"Q—Was one juror just about to be married when he was drawn for the jury?" A—"Yes."

Sensation

Q—"Did his fiancee put up in the hotel on the floor above the jury?" A—"Yes," and her mother or aunt lived with her."

Q—"And did this juror make visits to his fiancee?" A—"Only one that I know of. I went up with him and he introduced me to his fiancee. No, the sheriffs were not there."

Deported After 14 Jail Years

But it was the testimony of Peter W. White, another juror, which created a sensation the next day.

Q—"Did Sheriff——— ever speak to you?" A—"Yes."

Q—"Concerning Mr. Zottoli," A—"Yes."

A—"What did he say?" A—"What do you think about this lawyer?" I said "Which one?" and he said, 'Zottoli, he's no good. Everybody hates him.'"

After more than two hours Judge Brown retired to the judicial chambers and Terengo was taken to the detention room.

At a little after seven Judge Brown appeared and handed a typewritten statement to the press: It stated that he had accepted the testimony of the jurors as fact and had moved

"In view of the findings the defendant Terengo's motion for a new trial is allowed, the verdict set aside, a new trial ordered, and the further execution of the sentence upon him is hereby stayed."

Joy Unbounded

Terengo [illegible] knew no bounds when the news was told him. He has been in [illegible] the presence of death. But with the strain of the week suddenly snapped, his Latin blood leaped to the surface.

The second trial was held a little over a month later and Terengo, at the advise of his counsel, pleaded guilty to second degree murder. A mandatory sentence of life imprisonment followed.

Thus it was that in the spring he was brought to state's prison.

Once again it seemed that the story of Terengo's life, was over—over, that is except for the simple meaningless existence of a lifetime [illegible].

Fourteen Years

And for 14 years this was true. For 14 years Terengo rose each weekday morning to work for a few hours in the prison mattress shop and then, each week, walk for a little while in the prison yard, and return to sleep in the few square feet that was his world.

On December 23, 1934, the story of his life begins again. And strangely, the man who had prosecuted his case, was now in a position to grant him his freedom. For his release was one of the Christmas pardons of Governor Ely.

With $100 in his pockets, the fruits of 14 years work in the mattress factory, Antonio Terengo, now 36, walked out of state's prison.

A cousin of his was living in Holyoke and he went there to spend the Christmas holidays.

And to the reporters it seemed evident that at last the name of Terengo would disappear from newspaper [illegible] and for all.

8 Days Later

Eight days later his name was on the front pages of every paper in New England.

There had been a legal slip / the printing of the pardon / by accident it contained no clause concerning his deportation. / this had been the agreement w the pardon was approved.

There was nothing to do but / reat Terengo and serve one more bring him to state's prison.

In vain, a few days later, Zotolli, the faithful friend of / client, attempt to explain to Tere that this new imprisonment / shore lived.

Terengo would not listen.

On January 14, though, arrangements were made for him to go to his native land on the Vulcania. But new difficulties cropped up and Terengo remained in prison.

Legal Tangles

On March 27, with all legal tangles straightened out / preparation were again made for him to depart. [illegible] Ely's term / council here announced that he was not sure that Terengo could return to Italy.

[illegible] a few days as if he was [illegible] a man without a country."

An agent of the State Parole Board interceded for Terengo but to no avail.

Finally, on May 28, an agreement was reached and once again passage was booked for Terengo.

On Sunday, June 2, Terengo left State Prison for the last time. He was escorted to the pier by a parole board agent who remained with him until the boat sailed.

Nineteen years ago Terengo had set sail for America, a young boy of 19, his heart full of hops for the future.

Who can say what his thoughts were as he saw the shoreline of America fade from view on that Sunday morning of June 2 1935?

(In tomorrow's Boston Evening American another true murder-mystery story, taken from New England police and court annals, will be published.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

A Happy 'Holdup'

Adventurer's Story of Stranger Who Said: 'Hands'p'

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Well, sir, you boys and girls seem to have had adventures with about everything there is, but here's a bird with a new one. He is Morton Greenbaum of New York City, and he had an adventure with the English language.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Of course, that wasn't all of the adventure. There was a dark, sinister looking man in it—a man that frightened Mort almost to death. But the English language certainly played a big part, and to my mind it deserves most of the credit for the affair.

Mort came to this country from Hungary in the fall of 1921, at [illegible] first, with a sister in Cleveland. He's seventeen or a seventeen-year-old boy now, and Mort and [illegible] some years over there. He started with the first thing he was learning English.

Mort worked hard over his English, for he realized that the sooner he had it learned, the sooner he could get a job and take his place in society. Every evening he went to night classes at the Central High school, and in between times he brushed up on his class work by reading the newspapers.

And from those papers, Mort got a mighty funny conception of what these United States were like. The post war crime wave was on, and the papers were full of stories about hold-ups.

Mort didn't stop to think that those crime items were gathered from all over the country, and from all over the environs of Cleveland. He thought of them in terms of the small towns in Hungary which he knew.

And the result was that he began thinking of America as a place where law and order had broken down completely—where bandits ran wild over town—something like our own conception of the banditry in China. He felt that, almost any minute, he might run across a stick-up man. And the thought wasn't very comforting.

Then, one day in October, it happened. Mort had been plugging along on his English, and had learned many words that he recognized when he saw them on paper. But when people pronounced them, or when he tried to say them himself well that was a different matter.

Pronunciation was the thing that was bothering him most when, one day, as he was watching the store while his sister had gone upstairs for a few minutes, a man came walking in.

He came in silently, and that frightened Mort right from the start. He was a huge colored man and he stood in front of Mort with his right hand hidden under his coat.

"The pocket bulged," says Mort, "and something in it gave out a metallic sound. The man looked straight at me and, in a depressed but energetic tone, hissed one word: 'hands'p'."

Hands up! Mort knew that word all too well. He had seen it in the newspapers too many times not to know what it meant. "Strangely enough," he says, "I didn't seem to be afraid to die. True, my legs gave way and I could hardly rise from the stool I was sitting on, but the prospect of my own death was not so disturbing as the thought that my only sister, a mother of five little children, might come down any minute.

"Accordingly, with all the self-control I could command, I began retreating along the counter toward the stairs so that if my sister appeared I might give her a sign to appise her of the danger."

At the same time, Mort felt that he ought to say something to keep that bird's mind off such ideas as shooting Mort. But the only thing he could think of was a feeble "Uh a-at'".

The big colored man seemed to be losing patience. "Hands p'!" he growled, this time louder and more insistently than before.

"I had nearly reached the stairs," says Mort, "when the man seemed to lose his patience entirely. He brought his hand from his pocket—without a gun in it, to be sure—and gesticulated savagely in a certain direction above my head, bellowed from the depths of his lungs, 'Hands p'!"

And at that same [illegible] sister came down the stairs. The thing he most feared had happened. His brain reeled and his knees began to give way under him but he pulled himself together and [illegible] man says 'Hands up'.

But the dread word [illegible] on Mort's sister. [illegible] This time Mort lost [illegible] depths of his lungs, 'Hans up'.

And Mort's sister looked at Mort as if to say, "Well, what are you yelling about." What she did say was: "All right. Give him one of those red cans on the second shelf."

Puzzled, bewildered, Mort turned in the direction she was pointing. "And on the sides of those little red cans," says Mort, "my alien eyes spelled out the legend HAND SOAP! I had tripped up on nothing more dangerous than the niceties of pronunciation of the syllables 'up' and 'op'.

"And the metallic sounding thing in the colored man's pocket was only the jingle of a few pennies with which he paid for his purchase."

And that's how Mort Greenbaum got [illegible] language. Now can any of you boys and girls triumphantly say you've had an adventure with anything stronger? If you can the yarn is worth ten dollars as a [illegible]

HANEY ON GUFFEY DECISION

Supreme Court Bans COLLECTIVE GOVERNMENT By Unanimous Vote

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, May 20—By what is virtually a unanimous decision, the Supreme Court has again ruled against the Roosevelt administration's attempt to fasten a collective form of government upon us.

Although announced as a 6-to-3 decision, it should be carefully noted that not a single judge (not even Louis D. Brandeis and Benjamin N. Cardozo) upheld the regulation of local wages and hours by the federal authority.

The minority opinion merely refused to deal with the issue.

All the judges agreed that the so-called tax which was to be imposed on those who did not obey the coal code was not a tax but a penalty, and therefore unconstitutional.

Thus the means of enforcing the act was unanimously ruled out!

So don't make the mistake of saying that the decision was not sweeping and decisive.

The main purpose of the act was to raise wages, and the main means of enforcement was the tax penalty tax. Not one of the judges upheld these things.

All thoughtful persons have long realized that what is going on under the New Deal is a struggle between collectivism and individualism.

Collectivism means regimentation such as the National Recovery Act proposed, and such as the Guffey law would have set up in the coal industry.

Collectivism means imposing the will of some "leader" upon the people, by coercion of individuals. It means a system of duties, enforced by central authority.

On the other hand, individualism means free individual initiative, subject to the minimum of government regulation required to protect individual rights.

It is a system of rights, rather than duties. It is democracy in business.

The social life of the United States has evolved under the latter principle. The underlying significance of the Constitution lies in the fact that it stands for the following:

Protection of individual rights.
Voluntary individual initiative.
Local self-government.
Checks upon federal government.
Checks upon executive power.

The essence of the Constitution is its provisions against dictatorship, centralization, and regimentation.

But the essence of Roosevelt's New Deal is the opposite of these things, and through the National Recovery Act, Agriculture Adjustment Administration, and Civil Works Administration-Works Progress Administration devices, it has tried in one way or another to establish a centralized and coercive system of federal control.

Now the Supreme Court has again thwarted it. The court rules as follows:

(1) The Roosevelt administration must respect the individual rights of minorities. It cannot allow a group of employers and employes to make rules as to wages and hours for other producers and employes who are not willing to accept those rules.

(2) The Roosevelt administration must respect the local rights of the states. It cannot go beyond the constitutional measure of protection against restraint of interstate commerce, and exercise broad control over industry within a state.

(3) The Roosevelt administration must respect the legislative and judicial functions of our government. It cannot force Congress to delegate to the Executive (Mr. Roosevelt) broad legislative powers without standards of limitations.

Above all, what we Americans need to remember is this: If a centralized dictatorship were once established, it could do anything.

It could do things whether we liked them or not. You may now think that you would like what the Roosevelts promise, but no one can do everything for everybody. Times change, and the next time the dictator might experiment with something that would hurt you.

Then what could you do about it?

POLITICS Rules Money POLICIES

ECCLES FAVORS SPENDING PLAN

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service.)

New York, May 20—The monetary objective of the reflationists has been met!

Accordingly, any further continuance of federal deficit financing must be justified, if at all, on the basis of human need rather than on monetary grounds.

M. S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, apparently is not deterred in his public expression by the former assumption that the board was a non-partisan, non-political agency.

He candidly speaks as an administration spokesman, just as might a member of the President's cabinet. Mr. Eccles has played an important role in formulating the monetary policies of this administration.

In connection with Mr. Eccles' view of his role, it should be recorded that Eugene Meyer, Jr., who had been appointed governor of the Federal Reserve Board during the Republican regime, tacitly concurred in the implication that the job in reality was no longer nonpolitical by resigning, thus enabling the Democratic President to select a governor of his own choosing.

This development runs counter to the original hope of the sponsors of the Federal Reserve System, namely, that the board would be detached from the rough and tumble of politics. Maybe the original hope was unrealistic.

Even though under the newest amendment to the Federal Reserve act the Secretary of the Treasury and the comptroller of the currency were removed from membership on the board, the reality of treasury influence is currently greater than ever before.

In the business of money management in the United States, the continuance of an unbalanced federal budget is a primary influence.

Moreover, with the immense stabilization fund at his command, the treasury is in itself virtually a central banking system. Evidently Chairman Eccles feels that in these circumstances the Federal Reserve board is impotent except insofar as it influences the treasury toward co-operation along lines which it deems desirable.

I have had several recent conversations with Chairman Eccles which indicate that he is thoroughly in sympathy with the spending program of the Roosevelt administration.

His address before the Wharton Institute in New York made his views a matter of record.

Mr. Eccles no longer feels that a continuous deficit in the federal budget is necessary for the purpose of monetary expansion.

On this point, he specifically says:

"The supply of deposits of all commercial banks rose from $27,000 millions on June 30, 1933, to $37,000 millions on December 31, 1935, or about the pre-depression level, so that the contraction in the money supply which occurred as a result of deflation has been largely offset."

Mr. Eccles, however, holding the theory of a "compensatory" economy in which public spending must be substituted for any deficit of private investment and spending, objects to tapering off federal expenditures unless there is a further pickup in private activity.

"The flow of money must be maintained and increased in an expanding economy," Mr. Eccles declared.

AIR MAIL Operations STUDIED

40 NEW ROUTES SOUGHT

Universal Service

Washington, May 20—Hope of extending the nation's vast air mail network to meet the sharply rising volume of this class of mail in the last year, today was abandoned by postal officials.

Decision to postpone consideration of urgent requests from all sections of the country for establishment of 40 new air mail routes was forced by congressional action slashing allowances for this service below current costs.

On the other hand, postal executives are engaged in an intensive study of means to bring air mail operations within the range of the $12,000,000 allotted for this work, which is approximately $500,000 less than would be required to continue the service without curtailment.

Reluctant to seriously impair the service, particularly at this time, when air mail volume is monthly breaking all records, officials may defer any abandonment of present schedules until the end of the year. If this course is followed, however, and Congress then declines to make sufficient funds available through a deficiency appropriation, the curtailments for the first half of next year would be doubled those which would be inaugurated July 1, if the cut was spread over 12 months.

Though officials admit that all the 40 proposed new routes and extensions would not be necessary to meet demands of the next fiscal year, some of the major extensions, they believe, would go far toward bringing air mail service within easy reach of widely scattered sections which are not now on, or in close proximity to, air mail lines.

Inability of the Postoffice Department to obtain the sum it regarded as essential to meet the constantly expanding volume of air mail threatens not only to halt the advancement of this service, but may give it a sharp setback even though it is now at its peak. This, officials indicated, will depend upon what course they are obliged to adopt to effect the economies imposed by the limited funds.

STEEL OUTPUT Higher

Lifted One Point to 68½ P.C.

By Associated Press

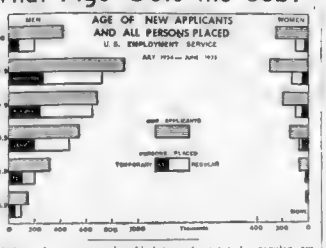
New York, May 20—Well sustained demand for heavy steel products above seasonal levels has lifted output one point to 68½ per cent of capacity, Iron Age stated today.

This week's total is only slightly below the year's high and the rise is regarded as particularly significant in view of curtailed buying by the automobile industry and lighter demand from agricultural areas, the survey said.

Ingot production is higher in the valleys and at Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Cleveland, while other districts are maintaining recent schedules.

"Finishing mill schedules," the magazine said, "are well maintained and tin plate output has been raised to practical capacity.

What Age Gets the Job?



At what age has an unemployed person the best chance to find a job?

The chart seeks to answer the question, insofar as it relates to men and women applicants registered with the United States Employment Service during the year ended June 30, 1935.

The hatched bars show the total number of new applicants. The black section of the lower bar shows the temporary placements and the white section shows the regular or permanent placements.

The highest proportion of applicants, and also the highest proportion of regular placements among men was found in the group aged from 21 to 29.9 years. In this group 41.4 per cent of all of both men and women placements were in regular employment.

The lowest per cent of regular placements of men was in the age group 60 to 69.9 years. In this group only one-half of the placements were regular.

In the group for women, the highest proportion of placements was in the ages under 20 years. Here, 67.8 per cent of placements were in regular employment. In the age group from 40 to 49.9 years, the percentage was 39.1, and above 50 years regular placements were virtually nil.

It is noted, too, that the proportion of regular job placements decrease in the higher age brackets in this group 41.4 per cent of all of both men and women.

ELECTRIC Power Output OFF IN WEEK

New York, May 20 (AP)—The Associated Press index of electric power production declined for the week ended May 16 to 107.8 per cent of the 1929-30 average from 107.9 per cent the previous week. A year ago the index stood at 95.8.

The range for recent years, with the 1929-30 average as 100, follows:

	1936	1935	1934	1933
High	107.9	105.5	97.4	91.9
Low	102.0	94.1	91.9	80.2

The Edison Electric Institute reported today that output of electric power last week amounted to 1,961,894,000 kilowatt hours, an increase of .7 of one per cent from the previous week and 13.4 per cent from the corresponding week of 1935.

Although the actual production of power was slightly greater than the week before, the advance was a bit less than normally expected for this time of year on a seasonal basis. For the week ended May 9 power production was 14.5 per cent higher than for the same week a year before.

Major geographical sections of the country displayed increases over a year ago. The percentage advances follow:

New England 11.8, Middle Atlantic 13.4, Central Industrial 16.9, West Central 16.6, Southern states 15.3, Rocky Mountain 20.0, and Pacific Coast 16.2.

Utah Copper

Utah Copper Co. declared a dividend of 65 cents, payable June 30, to stock of record May 29. On March 31 a dividend of 50 cents

INVESTING in These Times

THIS is an age when many of the old accepted principles of economic progress are being challenged as never before.

The danger of inflation, the regulation of private enterprise, rising taxes, and enormous governmental expenditures—all are playing their part in creating today's confusion and uncertainty—all have an important bearing on invested capital.

People of means today are confronted with all these and other perplexing problems. Many have learned by experience that even under normal conditions it is no simple matter to invest money successfully. Certainly today it is not easy to invest money safely and productively.

Investment is far from being an exact science. Every one who has money to invest should realize this. Yet even in these times it is possible to obtain a degree of success in this exacting field—impossible for an untrained individual to accomplish acting alone—by turning over all investment cares to an experienced and well-equipped organization devoting its entire time to the investment of funds and the management of property.

The choice of the organization itself is a matter of utmost importance to the owner of property. For the degree of management success that results will depend upon the character, ability and experience of the organization he selects.

PORT OF BOSTON

Imports SHOW HUGE Increase

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The Port of Boston is recovering its old-time prestige as the volume of imports steadily mounts to new post-depression peaks.

Collector Joseph Maynard in announcing the figures for the first three months of 1936, compiled in Washington, points out that Boston now stands second only to New York.

An import jump from the $25,337,789 of the first 1935 quarter to $40,452,653 in the same period this year lifted Boston into her old-time number two position ahead of Philadelphia, which had displaced her during the depression years.

The utility group is drifting into an enviable market position. We write this because technical trading factors seem more favorable, while operating conditions are obviously improved. At the same time the slaughter of New Deal legislation has perked up hopes for a reverse for the holding company bill when its turn comes next fall. Saving from Federal refinancing should mean that gains in gross will find increasingly marked reflection in net. With the typical factor now noticeably active in holding company results, investors and traders should find the urge to own attractive income or earnings too strong to resist, despite other fears.

Notebook: The Associated Press utility bond average, incidentally, continues to hold above previously stated resistance . . . Even though companion groups have long since broken comparable levels . . . And indeed are now acting as though new bases were sought . . . Which should place the utilities in fine position when general strength appears . . . In fact, make them most likely candidates for leadership . . . The rail bond average from the source appears to have at least fractured its downtrend . . . And could make it an undeniable break with a session or two of sustained strength.

The market has moved into an area where a technical rally is logical. Because selling in the past few sessions has proceeded from an unnatural response to very good news. In the last analysis, from government interference with business is the best news anyone could ask. Since beforehand only. However, the rally will cast real light on underlying sentiment as exclusively related to current price levels. A flat, uninteresting performance will obviously advertise the willingness of traders to breast the tide of summer business and trade dullness, no matter though they think it will be less than seasonal.

Here and there: If the above does prove to be the situation only die-hard bulls will fail to take the tip that quiet and probably selective markets will rule for awhile . . . And their disappointment will undoubtedly be acute . . . Though to us it seems that avoidance of a new slide will mean that the market had not raced too far ahead of business and trade . . . And it would hold to these levels of moderate reaction in preparation for a new upturn discounting fall expansion . . . That is the sort of picture the market could develop be our satisfaction.

B.-M. T. EARNS $4.24 on Common

Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit System, including Brooklyn & Queens Transit System, reports for 10 months ended April 30, 1936, net income of $4,367,841, equal, after allowing for 10 months dividend requirements on the 240,000 shares of $6 preferred, to $4.24 a share on the 736,664 shares of common, against $4,706,949, or $4.70 common share, in first 10 months of preceding fiscal year.

25 Years Ago

New York, May 20 (INS)—Missouri Pacific directors planned $20,000,000 improvement issue.

May cotton at 16 cents and July at 16.15, new high.

Stocks hold firm despite selling by big operators.

STOCK Prices Edge HIGHER IN QUIET DEALINGS

New York, May 20—The stock market displayed an improved tone today after weathering further light selling at the start, with the general list pointing irregularly higher in quiet dealings.

Motors and rails led the limited recovery, with such leaders as Chrysler, General Motors, N. Y. Central and Southern Pacific registering small fractional gains

Foods, utilities and general industrial issues were moderately higher. Coppers were mixed, with Kennecott again lower despite the increased dividend voted yesterday.

Alcohols were unsettled by a drop of nearly 2 points in U. S. Industrial Alcohol on top of the 3½ points break late Tuesday.

Timely Topics

A recovery note was added by "Iron Age," which pointed out that the current demand for heavy steel products seems to be sufficiently strong to offset reduced automotive requirements in the early summer.

The review placed this week's mill operations at 68½ per cent of capacity, a rati only slightly under the year's high mark. Backlogs were said to be more than sufficient to maintain production through May.

There was no attempt to forecast exactly what will happen to the steel situation in the third quarter, owing to the belief that a possible boost in prices would influence July and August demand. A moderate, but less than normal, slowing down in June, it was stated, can hardly be avoided.

Although electric power output for the week ended May 16, was up slightly from the previous week, the advance was a trifle less than seasonal.

Both the French franc and sterling were unchanged at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions, the former at 6.58⅜ cents, and the latter at $4.97.

NEW HAVEN Gross Gains

Operating revenues of the New Haven in April were a little more than 7 per cent greater than in April last year, when they were $5,911,246. An increase of a little more than 10 per cent was registered in income from passenger transportation, while freight revenue increased slightly more than 5 per cent in April this year against a year ago.

Increased expenses more than offset the gains, however, with net operating loss for the month between $320,000 and $360,000 less than in April, 1935, when the figure was $709,857.

Comments of Brokers

We would view the current decline as being in the nature of a secondary selling test, such as usually follows a normal retracement of part of the gains previously lost.—J. E. Molloy—Hornblower & Weeks.

Although further irregularity is to be expected, we feel that it seems likely that nearby bids will prove to be more numerous as the April lows are closely approached.—H. D. Comer—Paine, Webber & Co.

In the event that a marked diminution of offerings develops during today's session, such action should be construed as a favorable indication that the downward minor movement that has been taking place during the past few days has been terminated.—R. S. Feigus-Prentice, Blauner & Brady.

The situation seems to call for a continuance of present trading policies for the time being regardless of the fact that certain groups appear to be due for a meetive rest for long-range purchase.—J. S. Wilson—Josephthal & Co.

It does not seem reasonable to believe that the bear market is going to proceed very far which is based on nothing more than disappointment over how favorable Supreme Court decision did not have the expected effect on the market.—Townsend & McKinnon.

Fundamentals which have forced money into stocks have not changed. There are no important new media for the profitable use of funds and the increasing supply of flat purchasing power indicates an even larger amount of idle money than before.—O. M.-P. Murphy & Co.

We lean to the view that a good grade of investment issue will welcome offerings this morning and as the session progresses rallies will be attempted.—J. S. Bache & Co.

There seems little likelihood of a change in the character of the market. Any unexpected bad news will find the list in very vulnerable position.—J. F. Maher-Shields & Co.

NEW CARS 1936 FORD V-8

AS TOLD TO JAMES H. DODGE

Automobile Editor

By HERBERT D. WILSON

In the belief that most of our readers are interested in the performance characteristics of current automobile models, we have held a series of conversations with Herbert D. Wilson, nationally known performance tester of the Hearst organization, who has just completed personal tests of the 1936 automobiles. His reactions will be set down in detailed stories that will form a weekly feature each Wednesday in the Boston American. The first of this series carried herewith is on the 1936 Ford V-8.

This year accent has been placed on style and luxury, which, in my opinion, can be traced directly to the increased interest on the part of women drivers. In the past the man-interest has predominated to an extent that greater attention has been paid to mechanical and engineering developments. Since these have been perfected to a high degree, it was natural that there should be this turning toward greater comfort, beauty and ease of handling.

Conservative in streamlining, the 1936 Ford shows a definite trend toward the styling exhibited in the special bodies shown at the Ford exhibit during A Century of Progress. Perhaps Ford in the coming years will show gradual tendency toward these models.

FRONT END IMPROVED

By adopting a new radiator grille, hood and fenders, the front end has been improved and has been made longer because the top panels of the hood have been carried forward to the radiator grill without a break. The new grille, broad at the top and narrow at the bottom, blends gracefully with the heavy molded fenders, adding to the sturdy, substantial appearance of the front end.

I believe that most of us are inclined to take the wheels of an automobile for granted without close inspection. This year Ford has designed a new wheel which is pleasing in appearance, easy to clean and approximately five pounds lighter per wheel than the steel spoke type formerly used.

When you consider that this reduces the unsprung weight of the car approximately twenty pounds for the four wheels, the improvement in easy riding qualities must be substantial.

In addition to having a smart appearance, the new wheel provides a better construction for the braking drum and better coverage of the running gear under the car.

INTERIORS ATTRACTIVE

I found the interiors particularly attractive because of increased attention to detail. The door and window moldings, new style hardware and the modern treatment of the instrument panel reach a new height in color blending and harmony of design. The upholstery, too, has that fine detailed appearance of a high priced car.

Behind the wheel I sensed that the greatest 1936 Ford improvement was in its steering, for here was a high degree of maneuverability, exceptional ease of parking and at the same time a steady straight line tendency for the higher speeds of cross-country driving.

The steering gear ratio in the new cars has been increased from fifteen to one to seventeen to one. This accounts for the new facility with which the car can be parked. Then, too, the efficiency of the steering unit has been improved by replacing the former bronze bushings in the steering gear with new anti-friction roller bearings.

ROAD SHOCKS REDUCED

Additional improvements have reduced all road shocks through the steering wheel to a minimum which not only makes driving easy but adds a further factor of safety.

Operating the car on a straight-away I found that it accelerated from 20 to 60 miles per hour in high gear in 16 and three-fifths seconds, showing a top speed of 81 miles per hour. Engine performance was smooth, even at the highest speeds.

The increased accent on safety has naturally had a reflection in Ford construction. Safety glass is provided for all doors and windshield at no extra cost. The Ford 1936 body is all steel welded into a one-piece construction reinforced with steel.

Wood for construction purposes has been eliminated entirely. The new cars have rugged drawn steel wheels already mentioned, a strong X-type of frame, heavy radius rods and positive mechanical brakes.

CAR NEWLY SILENCED

This year special attention has been given to silencing the body. New materials have been utilized on floors, door and body panels and an improved method of placing and aligning the drive shaft has improved the quietness of the rear axle.

Again, quietness has been featured in the transmission in which not only the two upper gear ranges, second and high, but also low and reverse have been provided with quiet helical gears. This type of gear materially improves the shift from one speed to another, thus eliminating the possibility of clashing.

Usually in testing these cars I spend most of the time in the front seat, but during this test I wanted to get the passenger ride as well, and here I found a definite improvement which Ford engineers indicate is due to a reduction in unsprung weight.

Smooth riding, both in front and rear, quiet gears, a powerful engine, gracefully styled inside and out, a safety steel body—that's the new 1936 Ford.

P. S.—One of the Ford accessories that I was particularly enthusiastic about this year was the heater. Most of us who did any driving at all during the sub-zero spell appreciated a good heater. This one in particular appealed to me because it had a little nozzle that came up through the instrument panel and played a stream of hot air on the windshield. This unit was efficient in the coldest weather and the most severe sleet storms, keeping the interior compartment warm and the windshield free from fog and ice.

Of course, in the fine spring weather that we are currently enjoying, there is little thought of cold weather accessories, yet I suggest that this feature is something to put on the calendar to remember next winter.

THE SMART 1936 FORD 4-DOOR SEDAN

Graceful in design, with sturdy heavy fenders, the new Ford shows a definite trend toward conservative but modern streamlining. Forward sweep at the top of the hood adds length to the overall appearance of the body, and two rows replace the former three rows of vents in the new hood louvre.

COUPE LUGGAGE SPACE

Ample luggage space, easily accessible, is provided in the new 1936 Ford coupe. In addition, a ledge is provided at the top rear for smaller packages.

Performance, Major Specifications

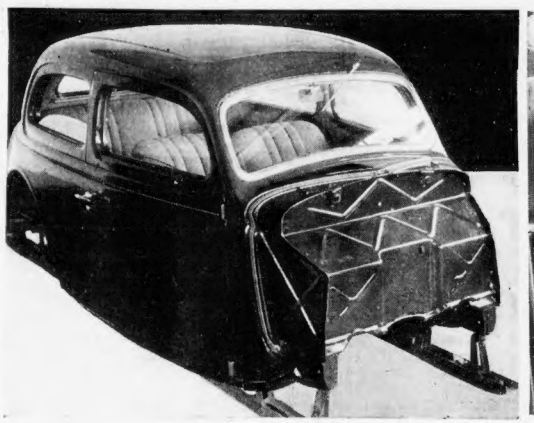
CLEAR RATIO—Rear axle 5-passenger 4-door sedan, 4.11.

TIRE SIZE—6.00x16.

WHEELBASE—112 inches.



LATEST IN SAFETY STEEL BODIES

Note here the solid steel construction of the new Ford body. Wood is not used in any part of the body for structural purposes. Rigid and twist-proof Ford bodies stand rough treatment and provide ample safety for passengers.

DETAIL OF FRONT END

The hood and front end assembly of the new 1936 Ford V-8 reflects a foreign influence. Distinctive originality is revealed in the new treatment.

WIDE, ROOMY SEATS

There is plenty of room for three, both front and rear, on the new Ford seats. Cushions are deep, well upholstered and the back is arranged at a comfortable angle.

FOOTRESTS IN 1936 FORD V-8

Footrests have been provided in the 1936 Fordor sedan models for increased rear-seat passenger comfort. Additional elbow-room comes from space formerly taken by window control mechanism.

NEWLY DESIGNED WHEELS

Cold-pressed steel wheels, five pounds lighter in weight, add to the easy riding quality of the new 1936 Ford by reducing the weight. These wheels take a 6.00x16 tire.

NEW WINDOW FOR FORD V-8

New type quarter-windows in the 1936 Ford V-8 are operated by a swivel mechanism and space formerly used for window control is utilized to give additional elbow room above the arm-rests.

LANDON POINTS THE WAY TO RECOVERY

AMERICA comes back today, as a weary traveler, to the only road that leads to national recovery.

At the crossroads, POINTING THE SAFE WAY and the straight way, is the soft-spoken governor of Kansas, Alf M. Landon, in his message to the attentive graduates of Attica, as in all his previous addresses to the nation, Mr. Landon has emphasized the plain truth that America will go toward security only when it emerges from the wilderness of inspired insecurity in which it has been wandering.

As the footsore traveler, disillusioned by his search for a short way and an easy way through the mire of the dismal swamp of false hopes, returns at last to set his feet on the long, hard road of charted experience, so have we as a people struggled through the morass of vain promises and futile experimentation to find again the broad highway of national progress wise men must travel.

IT is a familiar course that Governor Landon charts for his country. It is a way along which America has come far and happily. His political creed is one of humble simplicity. He bespeaks for government adherence to the simple virtues essential to the happiness and prosperity of an individual.

The Landon political philosophy is no more complex than that of a man who leads an honest life, deals fairly with his neighbor, and lives WITHIN HIS INCOME.

Governor Landon believes the American system of government is the best ever conceived, and that the future welfare of the nation depends upon its perpetuation. He believes the basic law of the land is sound and SHOULD BE PRESERVED. He conceives the destiny of the American people to be in fulfillment of their role as freemen, to which they are dedicated by all traditions of human liberty.

THESE are beliefs to which true Americans are renewing their allegiance. We have departed from them in pursuit of a mirage that has led us deeper into the slough of despair.

Governor Landon is the symbol of returning common sense to American thinking. His message to Attica is destined to be one of the milestones by which historians will trace our restoration to national CONFIDENCE AND CONSCIENCE.

Governor Landon's 'Two Classes'

The Doers; and the Talkers

IN REPLY to Mr. Kaltenborn's question: "If you should be nominated, will you make a real fighting campaign?" Governor Landon answered to the point, and briefly, thus:

"Well, that all depends on how you judge a man. Some people judge a man by the amount of talking he does. Other people judge him by what he gets done.

"All my life I have divided people into two classes. One, the people who do things; the other, the people who talk about doing things, and I have tried to keep out of the latter class.

"As to a fighting campaign, you never can tell how a horse will work until you hitch him up. The returns of the last two Kansas elections might answer that question. I don't think anyone ever considered our political campaigns in Kansas as pink tea affairs."

Governor Landon makes it clear that he believes in the Bible text "Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers, only."

He has been a doer all his life, managing his own career and successfully. And everybody in Kansas can testify that he has run the affairs of the State ably, successfully, efficiently and ECONOMICALLY.

Governor Landon's method is to balance income and outgo. He considers that ordinary American citizens have rights, does not look upon them as playthings, for professors and theorists.

Governor Landon says "you never can tell how a horse will work until you hitch him up."

Heaven knows the people of this country should know that by now.

When Governor Landon is "hitched up" he works, pulls the load. When he is nominated, this country will see "a fighting campaign."

The School Communism Probe

ONE OF THE LAST deeds of the 1936 Legislature in New York—and many thousands of loyal citizens will say one of its best—was to adopt the McNaboe Resolution providing for an immediate and thorough investigation of COMMUNISM in the public schools and colleges of the State.

Not merely was the measure voted by the Senate majority—it was voted OVERWHELMINGLY in the Assembly, with 119 members in favor and only 21 noes.

This joint action by the lawmakers of New York is sufficient proof that THEY have come to realize fully that Communistic propaganda and Communistic teachings are the most insidious and likewise the most DANGEROUS "activity" going on in our educational system.

IT IS not an evil that afflicts New York alone. It spreads across the country.

Recent inquiries before a sub-committee of the House of Representatives brought forth astonishing and alarming disclosures of what amounts virtually to a nation-wide conspiracy among certain groups of educators to BOOTLEG COMMUNISM into all of our schools and colleges—USING THE NATIONAL CAPITAL ITSELF AS THE FOCAL POINT OF SUBVERSION.

But while Washington, D. C., was shown to be the principal "laboratory" in this Collectivist scheme, New York—and especially New York City—has been the chief headquarters of the various cabals of Marxists and Marxist sympathizers responsible for the "guidance" of the revolutionary "movement."

Naturally, therefore, the schools of New York City have been among the worst infected—with even the assistant superintendent in charge of high schools OPENLY ADVOCATING the "right" to establish Communist "cells" in the schools, and winning the PUBLISHED APPROBATION of the Communists for his espousal of their "cause."

But other cities in the State are seriously affected, too.

Senator Byrne, of New York City, summed it up when he said:

"Communism IS in the schools of YOUR CITY and MY CITY and you can't close your eyes to it."

Obviously, the New York Legislature is performing a necessary and patriotic duty in going into this evil and menacing situation.

(M) Alice in Blunderland

By Nelson Harding

Just as in "Alice in Wonderland," we have our obedient Frog Butler and subservient Fish Footman transmitting their orders from the mansion in Blunderland.

Poor Alice Citizen is hiding behind that tree in the background, ashamed to be seen in such an un-American picture.

Feats of Telepathy

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

A little man from Hungary astonishes the psychologists with his inexplicable feats of telepathy. Call it that. Nobody knows what it is—the faculty of penetrating the secret thoughts of others and barring mysteries as easily as one peels an orange.

Blindfolded, he locates any hidden article. Without effort he understands the thoughts of others and calmly exposes their minds. They try to trick him—this astonishing Dr. Frans Polnar, late of the University of Budapest—by sending him from the room and then conveying to him, by thought alone, this fantastic order: "Come back into the room. Remove the coat and vest of any man in the room and then place the vest alone around the shoulders of any lady in the room."

Edwin C. Hill

Summoned thus, he re-entered, paused the briefest of moments and then carried out the order precisely as given telepathically. Someone left the room, went to the library, picked up a copy of "Who's Who in America," and turned to the brief sketch of Alfred E. Smith. Dr. Polnar followed into the library, went to the shelf upon which "Who's Who" had been replaced, immediately put his hand on the book, and turned to the biography of Mr. Smith.

SCIENCE BAFFLED

How does he do it? Who knows? He doesn't. The psychologists don't. The secret of mind reading, of thought transference, remains unsolved. The holy men of Thibet and the Hindu Yogis know something about it. Any one who has traveled in Africa enough to have gained some understanding of native ways has marvelled at the astounding faculty of black peoples to communicate news very swiftly and over vast distances by a natural telegraph of their own.

Whether the traveler walks, drives, or flies, he will find, at the end of a day, even if he comes upon an unknown tribe in the heart of the jungle, that his arrival is anticipated. He may have heard the tom-toma thudding: He may have caught a flicker of signal fires. Or he may not have heard or seen a thing at all. But he can be sure that long before he arrives the natives are perfectly familiar with his name, his habits and his accomplishments.

The other day a gentleman was making his way to the town of Bukavu on Kivu Lake, in Africa. He was attacked by a gorilla, which he had to kill in self defense. Many miles distant from his encounter with the great ape, he came upon a group of natives repairing the road.

They looked at him curiously, whispering among themselves. He stopped and asked their foreman what they were whispering about. He replied:

"They say, bwana, that you have killed a big gorilla."

No signal drums or signal fires—no sort of communication known to white man. But the natives know just the same. It is a familiar instance that news of the death of Queen Victoria and of King Edward the VII was known in the heart of Africa, in native villages, before it was known to white men at the end of cable lines in the large cities.

One need not believe in the supernatural to accept well-verified stories of the kind. Nor need one be convicted of overcredulousness. For, without question, there are latent in many of us, if not all, curious powers awaiting the application of simple, natural laws—laws which the white man, in his furious scramble between the cradle and the grave, has forgotten or neglected, but which are known to the older, simpler peoples who dwelt very close to the great heart of Nature.

More 'Social Pioneering'

By Benjamin DeCasseres

When President Roosevelt said in his Baltimore speech, "My friends, the era of social pioneering is only at its beginning," he forgot to add also that the era of INDIVIDUAL PRIVACY WAS AT AN END.

As concrete and irrefutable evidence that the "era of social pioneering" and ruthless government invasion of all private rights and individual methods of living go hand-in-hand we have not only the cynical violation of three articles of the Bill of Rights by the Black Committee, but the still more incredible "Works Progress Administration Consumer Purchase Survey," which is about to start under the snoopership of the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the U. S. Department of Labor, whose directing head is that world-eminent social pioneer, Madama Perkins.

This "Consumer Purchase Survey" is in the form of a 24 part questionnaire which every family in the country will receive and is expected to fill out.

TYPICAL QUESTIONS

Neither Hitler's Gestapo nor Stalin's OGPU could improve on this questionnaire for the purpose of making every human being in this country parasitic wards of the giant bureaucracy of politicians and crackpots that rule at Washington.

Here are some of the questions which our family heads are asked to fill out:

LOCATION OF TOILET — In living quarters, indoors or outdoors?

NUMBER OF TOILETS—Flush or otherwise?

Under Section Nine:

How much do you spend for cards, chess, skates, sleds, hiking, baseball, billiards, bowling, your children's toys, entertaining, pets, sheet music, etc., etc.?

Under Section 16:

How much do you spend for meals while traveling or on vacation, for ice cream, candy, soft drinks, lunches at school, food at home, food away from home?

Under Section 20:

How much does your wife spend for her haircuts, shampoos, waves, manicures, facials?

How much does husband spend for haircuts, shaves, shampoos, singeing?

What does your family spend for toilet soaps, toothpaste, cold cream, rouge, nail polish, perfume, razors, combs and brushes?

Under Section 21:

EVEN POSTAGE STAMPS!

Have you a vacuum cleaner, a sewing machine, a washing machine, a cooker, etc., in your house? If so, what did you pay for them?

Under Section 24:

How much money have you got in savings banks, checking accounts, on hand? How much in insurance policies?

In the other HUNDREDS of questions that are to be filled out in this raid on our privacies in a stunted constitutionless public every conceivable detail of your private lives will be laid bare.

Under Section Six even your expenses for postage stamps must be listed.

No reason is given for this imbecilic piece of boondoggling other than it is a "study of consumer prices," which is one of this Administration's equivalents for the motto of the Caesars: "SO I WILL IT, LET IT BE DONE!"

IT HAS JUST BEGUN!

Men have been imprisoned for violating arbitrary codes, men have been threatened for criticizing the acts of those in power, telegrams and letters have been seized without process of law by an irresponsible politically-minded committee, the details of the private lives of all citizens are decreed to be public property—until now, to cap the bitter comedy, the Department of Labor sends a man to your door to find out HOW MANY TOILETS YOU HAVE IN YOUR HOUSE!

And that, MY FRIENDS, is the era of SOCIAL PIONEERING, which we have on the highest authority has JUST BEGUN!

New York Day by Day -:- By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 20—Clarence Budington Kelland continues his career as the town's most amazing luncheon ring-master. He presides at the Dutch Treat Tuesday noon affairs where he not only uses the knife with a madman's fury, but throws salt into the wounds.

O. O. McIntyre

To intimates he is "Bud." He looks as though he might have just left the boys at the general store in his native Portland, Mich., to preside over what is likely the most sophisticated male gathering in America. Dutch Treaters are foremost writers, artists and editors.

At each luncheon famous celebrities are guests of honor. And the more celebrated they are, the more venomous is the Kelland introduction. It is no descriptive exaggeration to say he skins them alive and makes them like it.

Afterward he expresses the welcoming spirit of the Rotarian, for in truth he is actually a "folksey" fellow. Frank Crowninshield wrote of him in the Dutch Treat Year Book:

"Think of a boy wanting passionately to be Attila, suddenly discovering that in reality he was Ariel—the spirit of delight."

Among the Dutch Treat's honored guests given a ribbing by Bud Kelland during the past year were General Hugh Johnson, Sidney Kingsley, Mayor La Guardia, Rosa Ponselle, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, David Sarnoff, G. B. Stern, Rebecca West, John Charles Thomas, Jascha Heifetz, George Creel, Raymond L. Ditmars, Amelia Earhart and Dr. Alexis Carrel.

Mrs. Catherine Branchard has completed 50 years of rooming house keeping at 61 Washington Square and is still receiving "paying guests." Mrs. Branchard, a Swiss, is 80 now, but active enough to fare forth on sunny afternoons in her Gay '90 horse-drawn barouche for a jog about The Village she knows so well.

Her three-story brick rooming house with the steps scrubbed white, Baltimore fashion, is known in the square as "the house of genius." Among her renters in the struggling days were Frank Norris, Alan Seeger, Theodore Dreiser, Gelett Burgess, Eugene O'Neill, Thompson Buchanan and John Reed.

A modest plaque of Seegar adorns the facade. On a second floor room at No. 61 Madam Adelina Patti rehearsed for "Cavaleria Rusticana." Paul Palmer, of the American Mercury, is now a star boarder and Maxwell Bodenheim helps sustain the literary tradition.

There was a charm, a picturesque shabbiness, about the old-time rooming and boarding houses never captured by the chic modern bachelor apartment. I lived in three in New York and I never pass the sites where they stood without a pleasant little glow.

The chatelaine of one in West 57th street was a ringer for the impetuous Mrs. Pat Campbell and the only woman I ever saw off stage who walked about with a shoulder-high cigarette holder a la Campbell's crook. One night she waited up in the crepuscular gloom of the parlor about a little matter of three weeks' arrears. "Come here, young man," she trilled as I tip-toed through the hall, and appraising me through her lorgnette inquired: "What gave you the idea that this was an eleemosynary institution?" Then, doffing her fine ways, said: "Kick in before breakfast tomorrow."

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

LOVE-IN-REVERSE

A successful wife is one who takes marriage seriously—a successful divorcee is one who takes it serially.

It is almost as hard for some men to get along with only one new spring romance as it would be for a woman to get along with only one new spring hat.

Things to Remember—Girls got kissed just as often when a kiss was an achievement for the man and a surrender for the woman as they do now that it is the other way around.

When a woman says that man won't agree to give her a divorce, she usually means a divorce and nine-tenths of his possessions. Almost any man will let a woman unleash him when he finds she wants neither him nor his money.

The ultimate test of diplomacy is a man's ability to make a girl believe the reason he doesn't propose marriage is because he "loves her too much to tie her up." But it HAS been done.

Only two inevitable tragedies make a man's lifelong pals turn from him, one by one, are love and matrimony.

Today's Text: "When righteous men ... ice, there is great glory."—Proverbs 28:12.
